ten years had increased by 500 per cent in the state of Oregon.

Following the response, Mrs. Boyden favored the audience with a piano solo. Following Mrs. Boyden were the announcements of the day by Superintendent Young.

F. L. Griffin of the Oregon Agricultural college was then introduced. He gave an educational talk on "Industrial Clubs," impressing the importance of organized experimental work in the schools and their influence upon the adult population of the communities.

Mr. Griffin was followed by M. S. Pittman of the Oregon State Normal school in a splendid and interesting address entitled, "Captains in Call-co." Mr. Pittman opened by having all rise and partake of a few minutes' exercise.

His address was based upon the importance of country schools. He presented both the teachers' and the public's views of rural teaching showing the hundreds of important functions that a teacher is expected to perform and the great task that falls upon their shoulders in the rural communities. Again he showed the privilege that rural communities demanded and enjoyed in regard to securing educated and experienced teachers. He made a strong plea for a uniform school system and standard of teaching and salary in the state of Oregon.
