NEWS OF FARM AND RANGE

Improving McKay Road—J. A. Hubbard, postmaster at McKay, has been here today raising further money for improving the road between McKay postoffice and Pendleton. The Commercial Club recently contributed $100 with which to buy powder for blasting work. The road work is being managed by W. N. Wright and grading work is now underway with the result the road is being made much better for travel. The road is an old one but is not a county road and hence has to be improved by private work.

Another Rabid Coyote—A coyote that ran wild in the Starkey district in the southwest part of Union county created considerable excitement in that neighborhood. The animal succeeded in biting three dogs and several pigs. Two women only saved themselves by fighting it off with clubs.

When killed by Fred Hagey, a rancher of that community, the animal was writhing in convulsions on the ice of a small stream where it had gone for a drink.

The Name on the Box

The right name on a jewelry box adds to the lustre of the brightest gem.

It carries security with it—it impresses the recipient of the gift.

The jeweler's name backs up the flashing fire of the diamond.

The average citizen is not a jewel expert. He must buy with confidence.

He must take the name and guarantee of a reputable jeweler for fineness of quality and fairness of price.

One of the best to guides safe jewelry buying is the advertising in The East Oregonian.

The best jewelers advertise because they are proud of their names and the reputation behind them.
