Useful Presents Please the Most

THE day of frivolous knick-knacks has passed and gone. Their lack of usefulness made them extravagant to the giver and they never brought any REAL PLEASURE to the receiver.

An Overcoat, a Suit, a Mackinaw, Shoes, Slippers, Gloves, Shirts, Hosiery, Hats, Caps, Suit Cases, Ties, or any article—such as we carry—that tends to add to the "dressed-up" appearance and comfort of its lucky receiver carries with it real pleasure and happiness, because it reflects a true compliment from the giver. It is a gift of high regard and is appreciated by the recipient for days and months after Christmas day.

Your esteem for, and estimation of, the receiver's character, is conveyed more plainly than words in the character of the gift you give.

MAKE IT A USEFUL PRESENT—IT WILL PLEASE THE MOST.

A WANDERER'S SONG.
A wind's in the heart of me,
A fire's in my heels,
I am tired of brick and stone
And rumbling wagon-wheels;
I hunger for the sea's edge, the
limbs of the land,
Where the wild old Atlantic is shouting on the sand.
Oh, I'll be going, leaving the
noises of the street,
To where a lifting forest-foot
is yanking in the sheet;
To a windy, tossing anchorage
where yaws and etches
ride,
Oh I'll be going, going, until I
meet the tide.
Oh I am tired of brick and stone,
The heart of me is sick,
For windy green, unquiet sea,
The realm of Moby Dick;
And I'll be going, going, from
the roaring of the wheels.
For a wind's in the heart of me,
A fire's in my heels.
—John Masefield.

For many years there has been criticism here because local loans are taxed whereas an out-side concern may lend money here and be exempted from taxation. Mr. Strain has frequently been criticised for assessing notes and accounts yet he has had no alternative under his oath as an official. The proposed amendment endorsed by the Farmers Union convention, points a way to relief from this situation. It will give the legislature power to adjust the matter equitably and it there is any good reason why such an amendment should not be adopted this newspaper would like to hear it. The present arrangement penalizes the local man with money to lend and virtually drives him from the community. Pendleton may well join in trying to better the situation.

Hitting the jingo drum with great ferocity a Portland paper shrieks that this country is steeped in Misguided provincialism because it Hysteria. does not maintain a big army and the country is in deadly peril accordingly, etc., etc. A hot bath is the best treatment for such nervousness. There is no cause for so much shuddering and it is becoming a bore. It is wholly true our land force is weak but there is nothing to show we would be any safer from war if we had a monster army. It is significant that the nation having the largest and most highly perfected war machine in the world is now in the saddest plight of all and there is good reason to believe that plight is due not to the fact the nation was unprepared but was too well prepared. If the German army had not been so efficient there would have been no war and more than a million brave Teutons now in their graves would still be with their loved ones. It is true we need to spruce up in some respects and the administration is alive to the fact. But why exaggerate the situation and try to get the country into hysteria over nothing. If the war continues a few months longer at the rate it has been going the big European nations will be so exhausted they will trouble no one, particularly a distant and neutral nation like this. Nor will Japan bother us, if for no other reason than because our navy is greatly superior to the Japanese navy. But there is one great step that may be taken towards improving our military efficiency and that consists in withdrawing as soon as we consistently can from the Philippines. The present administration favors this move and a measure looking to that goal is now before the senate with the president's endorsement. Those who are not mere jingoes but really give thought to the question of safety from war will support this measure. Why don't the blatherskite papers like the Oregonian say something in behalf of Philippine independence.

Louis D. Brandeis said the railroads could save a million dollars a day by using more efficient methods of operation; the roads said no. I have never heard that he made any estimate of the possible saving on life insurance among the people who take small policies and pay for them in weekly installments in case the costly system of collection were eliminated. But he was one who worked for the establishment in Massachusetts of the saving bank insurance—where the policy buyer goes to a savings bank for his policy and makes his payments over its counter. The other day Mr. Brandeis made an estimate of the indirect saving of small policy holders, not only in Massachusetts, but throughout the country, because of the establishment of these savings bank insurance branches. These state backed small policies are sold by the savings bank at a cost of about 17 per cent less than when bought from the big private stock companies. Besides, "dividends" (which in the last five years have risen from 8 1-3 per cent to 20 per cent are credited on the policies. So a big direct saving has been made to those who took insurance in this way. Still, the total of the savings bank policies sold is very small, compared to the total business of this sort done—the total is some $115,000,000 a year in the United States. But because of the competition of the Massachusetts saving bank insurance branches the big private companies have been induced to reduce their rates and devise new and less expensive collecting and accounting methods. Said Mr. Brandeis of the result: "The improvements made by the private industrial insurance companies as a result of the Massachusetts plan have, of course, been extended throughout the United States. When it is remembered that the aggregate premium income of the industrial policies is now about $115,000,000 a year, it seems clear that the industrial policy holders today are buying their insurance for at least $20,000,000 a year less than they would have had to pay had the rates prevailing prior to September, 1906, remained in force."

What may be termed the scholarly brigade is desperately fond of berating the newspapers Sensationalism. for alleged shortcomings and the pet charge is that the modern newspaper resorts too much to sensationalism. The charge is largely made in ignorance for it is a fact the average reputable journal exercises more care upon this subject than the people suppose. One newspaper that has just shown itself superior to a college organization upon this point is the Boston Post, probably the largest paper of New England. The story in question involved a young woman and the Post suppressed the story as unfit to print. Yet the story was published by the Harvard Monthly. If our collegiate authorities wish to point the way to decent journalism they should practice what they preach.

FROM THE PEOPLE

OBJECTS TO PORTLAND CONTROL

Rep. Allen Eaton Says He Is Not Given Fair Hearing.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 8, 1914.

To the Editor of the East Oregonian: I am a candidate for speaker of the house of representatives of the Oregon legislative assembly. The Oregonian newspaper has a candidate in the person of Mr. Ben Selling of Portland. Through the influence and demand of the editor of the Oregonian Mr. Selling procured the nomination by a bare majority of the Multnomah delegation.

I had supposed that the speaker-ship was of state wide concern, but here it seems to be considered as a prerogative of Portland, or worse, of a small band of Portland interests. That this is true is evidenced by the fact that I have not been able to have published in the Portland papers my side of the controversy. They have refused to print my articles in my own behalf, the substance of which I enclose you for your personal use.

It appears, therefore, that Portland, or more accurately, the few who assume to speak for her, are not satisfied to have procured at the last session the presiding officers of both houses and the chairmanships of the ways and means committee of both houses—the committees which control the expenditures of the money of the people of the whole state—not satisfied to have three-fifths of the representation in congress of the state of Oregon, but are still determined to dominate the legislature through its officers and principal committees.

The fruit of this control is seen in the record of expenditures of the last legislature—the most extravagant in the history of the state.

I think the rest of the state is entitled to participate in its own legislature on equal terms with the metropolis. The forces behind Mr. Selling do not intend to permit this if they can help it, or permit any participation except in subordination to their dictation.

I am writing this to the press outside of Portland, in the belief that there can still be found outside of Portland a free and fair press—the closest to the plain people—who whether on one side or the other of any state-wide public question, are willing to give every side a fair hearing. I ask this with the more assurance since the Oregonian not only closed its columns to me, but makes the false claim that Mr. Selling has already more than enough votes to elect him. It is not true that he has a majority of the house pledged to him, nor have I such a majority. There are members unpledged, who will doubtless consider the situation and vote as their conscience dictates. I am trying to have them vote understandingly, uninfluenced by false representations.

I am not asking your support, though I would be grateful for it, but only that you shall inform your members and your subscribers, through your columns, of my claims by printing this letter or the purport of it.

And you can be assured that with a faithful and loyal support behind me, this fight will not be over until it is over—in the house.

This is my fifth successive term in the house, and I submit that the experience so gained is some evidence of my qualifications for the office.

Yours sincerely,
ALLEN EATON.

CAN YOU SPEAK UMPQUA?
Names From Tribal Tongues are Wanted for Newly Mapped Area.

Umpqua Indian words are wanted by the department of history of the University of Oregon, Eugene.

An extensive area in the Umpqua national forest is being mapped by the forestry service headquarters at Roseburg, and the forestry men want suitable names for the physical features of the region. The State University has undertaken to communicate with some of the few remaining Umpqua Indians, and to interview some of the pioneers whose early days were spent in Umpqua territory. Two Indians who may be able to tell what their tribesmen called the hills, valleys, and creeks of the forest area are "Jake," who lives back of Comstock and Yoncalla, and "Mals Tipton," of Glide, all in Douglas county.

A. F. Kerr, a University of Oregon graduate of 1909, now on the office force of the Umpqua national forest, is working with the University in this research matter.

Devil's Knob and God's Dog are specimens of colloquial names that may be abandoned on the official government maps if suitable substitutes from the Umpqua tongue can be provided.
