SHIP SAFE ON ROCKS.

No Danger to Vessel if Sea Remains Calm—Steamer Standing By.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 22.—Pinned on the rocks in the southwest end of Cedros Island the Danish motorship Malakka was holding its own under calm weather conditions but is in danger of going to pieces should high winds and heavy seas develop.

The Malakka, which carried no wireless apparatus, was driven ashore in the storm of December 15. The first tidings of the Malakka's distress came in a wireless from the steamer Arizona, standing by, which is prepared to pick up the crew and as much of the cargo as possible if the ship goes to pieces.

Feeding Mill Screenings.—Smythe Bros. have contracted for the entire output of screenings from both local flour mills and will use the screenings for feeding range sheep. The Pendleton Roller Mills had 200 tons of screenings on hand at the beginning of fall. They will feed alfalfa meal mixed with 30 per cent syrup to ewes. This firm is also preparing to feed cotton seed cakes to their bands this winter. A story in the Christmas number of the National Woolgrowers states the cotton seed cakes are being extensively used in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. Two hundred cars of the new feed have been shipped into Idaho.

Stanfield Fruit Growers.—At a meeting of the Stanfield Fruit Growers' Association Friday evening the following officers were elected for the year 1915:

J. D. Wallace, president; Wm. Frederickson, vice president; R. H. Irwin, secretary and treasurer.—Stanfield Standard

Sheared Sheep Too Soon.—Leonard Willard, a Treadale sheepman, is under arrest for having sheared a band of 500 sheep a few days ago, according to a story from Portland.

On complaint of Humane Officers Lewis and Pitts, Willard was brought into District Judge Jones' court Saturday morning, charged with cruelty to animals. W. H. Densmore and S. A. Crowner, two of Willard's employees, also were arrested on the same charge.

The humane officers averred that Willard had sheared 500 sheep in mid-winter, leaving them in well-ventilated shed at the mercy of the cold December blasts. Four had died from the exposure, it was testified, and many others were in bad condition. Some of the sheep, it was said, had bled profusely from wounds caused by the shearing machine.

"It is not unusual to shear sheep in the winter," said Willard on the stand. "Usually it makes 'em fat. They put on flesh to take the place of the wool."

Densmore and Crowner were dismissed by Judge Jones, who said they were only acting under Willard's orders.

"Any man who would shear his sheep during this cold weather would pluck the feathers from a chicken and expect it to live outdoors in the winter. I'm going to impose the maximum fine of $100," said Judge Jones.

Willard gave notice of appeal.
