"MOVIES" INSTEAD OF CHRISTMAS TREES

NORTH YAKIMA, Wash., Dec. 22.—What is said to be the biggest Sunday school in the Pacific northwest, that of the First Methodist church of this city, will give Christmas "movies" for both children and grown-ups in lieu of the usual Christmas tree programs. An afternoon performance of the three reels which tell the story of Israel in Egypt, of Herod and of the Christ child, will be given for the younger people, and this will be interspersed with songs and recitations. In the evening the same reels will be shown in the auditorium of the church without charge of the members of the church and Sunday school. Most of the Sunday schools of the city, including the Methodist, will have "white" Christmas programs, giving gifts for the poor rather than receiving them.

Ship Destroyer Honored. LONDON, Dec. 23.—The Victoria Cross has been conferred on Lieutenant-Commander Norman B. Holbrook commander of the submarine B-11 for torpedoing the Turkish battleship Messudieh in the Dardanelles on December 12.

CORRESPONDENT WITH AUSTRIAN ARMY TELLS ABOUT LIFE AT FRONT

JUST ONE THING AFTER THE OTHER BUT IT'S A GREAT EXPERIENCE.

William G. Shepherd relates the Daily Routine Change in Schedule Is Always Welcomed and Then Excitement Holds Sway—Newspapermen Under Strict Orders.

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.) FELDPSTAMT, No. 39, near the Hungarian Frontier, Nov. 7.—(By courier to Vienna.)—Here's the way that we get our marching orders in the Kriespressequarter, the war press headquarters in Austria Hungary. Only yesterday morning some of us returned from Przemysl to this quaint little ancient town in Galicia, expecting days of dullness until we were again taken to the front.

At the noonday meal the officer in charge of carriages which are at our disposal tapped on his wine glass for attention and said: "Who wishes to go to—?" naming the big Galician town six miles distant, where there are coffee houses, stores and other blessings of civilization. His question is a daily one; he asks it only to know how many carriages he must have ready after dinner and at what hours. We raise our hands, he counts heads and two hours later we find ourselves after a ride through the hills walking through the streets of a lively town where some of the chief officers of the army have their headquarters including the particular officer who has charge of the newspaper correspondents.

We go to the coffee houses to talk to Max. He used to be a waiter in a newspaper row restaurant in New York and he's always willing to talk interestingly of those golden days before he took a notion to come back home to Galicia with his "pile," only to lose it here. In 1915, though, he's making $10 a day in New York or Chicago or Frisco by his waiters' tricks. He confesses some of his New York tricks to you, now that the old days and the old place are far away and so you talk, waiting for Sunday to end. It does so with a bang, at exactly 6 o'clock. The arc lights have been going for an hour, but suddenly the streets are turned off and the Jewish merchants raise their shutters at 6.

You fare forth in the streets crowded with officers, soldiers, civilians, girls and youths a courting, and in the rush you meet another newspaper man. "We go to Serbia in the morning at 3 o'clock," he says. "I've just heard it."

"You do not believe such good news. You rush to army headquarters and to the officers of the colonel who has charge of the fates and destinies of newspaper men in charge. His offices are crowded with other officers receiving orders. There is not a chance to speak to him. Anyhow, if the story is true, you'll hear it, officially, in time. Officers are rushing in and out. One of them has a bale of paper bills as high as a silk hat. Something's doing, anyhow, so you get out.

Back over the hills you go between seven and eight in the cold evening and enter the long, narrow room where supper is at 8. An officer is reading orders, with a group of newspapermen standing about him. He calls out a list of names; those mentioned cross to the other side of the room. "At 3 o'clock tomorrow morning he at the depot," he says to them. "We are going to Serbia to see the Austrian lines there. All those names I have not called will go on a train that leaves at 3 o'clock in the morning, day after tomorrow. We are to go in two lots."

Supper is gulped. There's a lot of packing and a little sleeping to be done within the next seven hours for those who go tomorrow morning. And so, all through the night, there is a scurrying of soldier servants through the streets of the little aid village. They rush from one little house here to another little house there where correspondents have rooms, collecting baggage. The village folk look on in their night gowns, night caps and slippers, holding candles for heavily shod soldiers who clatter around their little homes; they're not used to such carryings-on. At three on the dot, the train pulls out for its 500-mile journey across Hungary to Serbia, where the air is still warm and where our winter clothes will be in the way until January.

Breakfast was a dull thing in the once lively "casino" this morning; only a few of us were left and tomorrow morning at 3 o'clock after another stirring up of the village we, too, shall start out. And, this old town will become its sleepy old self again, with only the memory of those strange days when newspaper men from the farthest corners of the earth gathered here to watch the Austrians fight the Russians.

170 Tins of Opium Taken. NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Customs officers seized aboard the White Star line steamship Adriatic 100 tins of opium, said to have come from London, and arrested James Murphy, a storekeeper on the ship, on the charge of attempting to smuggle the forbidden drug into this country. Later the officers arrested Tora Sata, a Japanese, on the same charge and confiscated 70 tins of opium found in his apartments. The tins are valued at $50 apiece and the entire amount $3,500 worth, constituted one of the largest seizures of the drug ever made in this city. Murphy and the Japanese were held in 15,000 bail each.

POLES ARE URGED TO FIGHT GERMANS

PETROGRAD, Dec. 22.—Appealing to the nation, the central national Polish committee requests all Polish parties to fight the German and Austrian invaders, to win national autonomy. "The present historic moment," says the committee, "obliges the Poles temporarily to put aside party programs and even the greatest political and social questions in order to unite for our national defense."

Because of this appeal the Moscow Clavophile committee, representing many Russian parties, sent the Polish committee a hearty expression of sympathy because of its decision and the aggressive attitude of the Poles towards the Germans and Austrians on account of the appalling devastation wrought by them in Poland.

Toys that Educate

A child's imagination is lively. It creates in miniature a world of its own.

Wise parents take advantage of this in toy choosing.

They select toys that have an educational value, that stimulate the child's mind and keep it working in healthy channels.

There are many such toys—for young and old, some of them so interesting that it will be hard to keep papa and grandpa from monopolizing them.

Where to see them? at any of the good stores.

And the way to the best store.

Full directions will usually be found in the advertising columns of The East Oregonian.
