Cottolene

Cottolene took the lead as a cooking fat over a quarter of a century ago. It was in the van of the great movement for the betterment of household service and for the improvement of food products.

There is no secret about Cottolene. The world has known it for more than a generation. It is an exact combination of fresh, pure, sweet, ultra-refined cotton seed oil whose grade is so high that it is not listed on the market, with beef stearine from fresh, pure leaf beef suet.

It is this combination which gives Cottolene the splendid qualities for shortening, frying and cake-making which produce results that delight everybody.

TWO CHILDREN DIE RESULT OF POVERTY AND UNCLEAN HOME

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 28.—Two children are dead and their mother, Mrs. Edmund Minette, is in a critical condition at a local hospital as a result, attending physicians declare, of poisoning contracted because of poverty and unsanitary conditions in their home at Melmont. Mrs. Minette and the children were brought here. Sarah, 4 years old, died a few hours after arrival, and Edward, an infant son, died at the hospital. Mrs. Minette may recover.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.—Adv.

Got to Go Deep to Cure Rheumatism

Liniments Help Locally, But the Disease is Way Down Inside.

To get at the source of rheumatic pains it requires the deep, searching influence of S. S. S., the famous blood purifier. Rheumatism is primarily a blood disease that, since it is in this vital fluid that rheumatic tendencies are carried, lodges in the joints and muscles, there to irritate the nerves and produce pain. And in order to drive out these pain-inducing poisons it requires S. S. S. to sink deep into the tiny glands imbedded in the innermost tissues. S. S. S. travels wherever the blood goes and never loses its medicinal influence. This explains why it overcomes the most chronic forms of rheumatism, why it dissolves those hard deposits that thicken the joints, for it acts as a solvent and assists the blood to provide in the tissues those natural elements for which the body-building process continually craves and must have.

If you have never used S. S. S. for rheumatism, get a bottle today of any druggist. Use it as directed and with some simple home helps you will soon detron the worst and most painful forms of rheumatism. Write the medical department, The Swift Specific Co., 65 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for additional advice. Yours may be a case where a slight help from a specialist whose advice is free, will solve the mystery that has been making life miserable for you. When you see for S. S. S. insist upon it and refuse all substitutes.

General Kenyon after whom the post is named, comes during Indian summer, to visit and inspect the little garrison. He is accompanied by his daughter Kate Kenyon, whose engagement to Lieut. Parlow, Major Burleigh's second in command is about to be announced. Lieut. Hawkesworth, another young officer of the post also loves Kate and she secretly returns his affection. Her hand, however, is pledged to Parlow and she will not repudiate her promise. At a gay Hallowe'en party a breathless scout rides furiously into the post. "The Blackfeet have taken to the warpath," he cries.

It is the fulfillment of a threat made by old Scabbrow, the chief of the tribe, some time before, when Major Burleigh at the behest of the government, had forbidden the Blackfeet to hold their immemorial Sun Dance.

The announcement of the scout throws the garrison into instant activity. The women are ordered into quarters and the men take up the defence at the stockade. But the number of defenders is pitifully puny to oppose the advancing hordes of redskins ferociously determined to avenge their fancied wrongs. Help must be obtained from Fort Assinaboine, the nearest fort where there is a strong garrison. The task of riding to secure the needed help, a mission that means almost certain death, is dodged by Lieut. Parlow. Hawkesworth then volunteers. The bag of dispatches, telling of the post's plight, is handed him by Kate Kenyon. As she slips the straps over his shoulders, she lets her arms linger there and whispers, "I love you."

With Hawkesworth gone the stockade is made as strong as possible. Before another day has passed the war-whoops of the Indians and their blood-curdling battle cries are heard. Defense is an almost hopeless task from the very first. At last it seems

CAFETERIA PROFITS TO EVENTUALLY PAY FOR ALL EQUIPMENT

SYSTEM OF SERVING MEALS AT HIGH SCHOOL IS PROVING A SUCCESS.

Prices Charged for Food are Small but Patronage has Steadily Increased—An Average of 35 to 40 Students Take Luncheon Each Day—Girls Furnish Help.

Though the charges for the noon meals served to the students of the high school in the domestic science department are so small that fifteen cents will buy a most satisfying meal, the profits from the school cafeteria will eventually pay for the cost of the entire equipment of the kitchen and dining room, according to Miss Alice Butler, head of the domestic science department. "Had we started the cafeteria at the beginning of the fall term we would have paid for the equipment in one year," she states. The cafeteria was started about December 1 and has received a very gratifying patronage ever since. On an average of 35 to 40 students take their lunch there each day and on stormy days the number has gone as far as 75. Several of the instructors eat there also.

A paid cook is employed to prepare the menus and all other help is furnished by the girls in the department. Cafeteria service prevails, the students selecting just what they want and there is nothing rigidly about any of the "helpings." No meats are served but some substantial substitute such as baked beans or macaroni and cheese is always to be had. There are soups and salads, desserts and hot beverages, and all are appetizing enough for any epicure.

The introduction of the cafeteria in the high school is another evidence of the progressiveness of the Pendleton schools. Not only does it eliminate the necessity of long walks and cold lunches but it gives the students much practical experience. And this practical experience is not confined entirely to those girls registered in the domestic science department. The students of the commercial department are called upon to keep the books so that a careful check is kept on all receipts and expenses.

As an evidence of the popularity of the domestic science department is its crowded condition. Though Miss Cecile Boyd was added the beginning of the semester as an assistant to Miss Butler, the entire time of a second assistant could be used to good advantage, for Miss Butler and Miss Boyd are now doing the work of three instructors.

WHAT the Press Agent Has to Say of Present and Coming Attractions

Pastime Today.

David Belasco's great play of army life and Indian warfare, "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

The story of "The Girl I Left Behind Me" takes place in and about Fort Kenyon, a lonely frontier outpost where a small detachment of cavalry is stationed under the command of Major Burleigh, a bluff, hale soldier, the apple of whose eye is little Dick, his motherless son, and the pet of the post. Years before little Dick's mother deserted the major for another army officer whose name the major does not know. But he has carried on an insistent search for the man and sworn to kill him. The erring wife, cast off by the man who lured her away has died of a broken heart some time before in a distant city without disclosing her faithless lover's identity.

General Kenyon after whom the post is named, comes during Indian summer, to visit and inspect the little garrison. He is accompanied by his daughter Kate Kenyon, whose engagement to Lieut. Parlow, Major Burleigh's second in command is about to be announced. Lieut. Hawkesworth, another young officer of the post also loves Kate and she secretly returns his affection. Her hand, however, is pledged to Parlow and she will not repudiate her promise. At a gay Hallowe'en party a breathless scout rides furiously into the post. that the end has come. The brave old general with a white, set face, hands his daughter a pistol. She undresses and prepares to kill herself when the garrison falls. But suddenly a trumpet call is heard. The Twelfth cavalry sweep to the rescue driving the Blackfeet, panic-stricken before them. Hawkesworth, now that Parlow's craven nature is exposed, is accepted as Kate's future husband. Major Burleigh receives a faded miniature from the city where his wife died. It is the picture of her betrayer which has just been found. Burleigh with a savage oath recognizes the face as that of Parlow. He is about to execute summary vengeance upon the wrecker of his happiness when Margaret Kenyon, the general's elder daughter interposes. The slaying of Parlow is prevented and ultimately the gray-haired major and Margaret Kenyon find happiness together.

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teaspoon full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold. Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.
