He died in Spokane last week of Bright's disease and the body was brought to Walla Walla for interment. Deceased was a son of the former chaplain of the penitentiary at Walla Walla.

Suit for Divorce.
Alleging that her husband has several times accused her falsely of unwise conduct and has sought to induce her to live a life of shame for pecuniary benefit, Ellenah A. Weick has commenced suit against her husband, Earl L. Weick, who is an Echo blacksmith. The couple were married in Vale, Feb. 19, 1912. She asks for a divorce, for $200 with which to prosecute the suit, for $25 a month permanent alimony, for a half interest in a tract of land owned by them and valued at $4500 and for a third interest in all other property of defendant. W. M. Peterson is her attorney.

HOUSE BOMBARDED.

Mr. Coffman made a complete search of the neighborhood but could learn nothing of the mysterious storm of missiles. There is no attic to the house, which is a small, three-room building, there is no place to hide on the roof and the house stands by itself in the center of a big lot. High bluffs rise themselves behind it some 50 yards but as Mr. Pierce points out, any one of the rocks thrown from the distance would have cracked the shingles, and there was not a shingle even splintered. Again, he asks how light chips or a boulder could be thrown that distance or how any missile could be thrown down the chimney. At the foot of the bluffs are several clumps of bushes but Mr. Pierce and Mr. Coffman both beat these out as did Chief Kearney. At some distance the officer found some footprints but declares the stones could not have been thrown from that point with the results enumerated.

On the roof are a number of sticks that lodged there while rocks strew the ground to testify to the bombardment. Neighbors have carried off other rocks which they themselves saw fall. Altogether, the affair has grown to quite a neighborhood mystery, and, as the groups gather to discuss it, they involuntarily show the superstitious trend of their thoughts by telling of ghosts, apparitions and other strange things of which they have heard in times past.

The mysterious stone throwing began Friday afternoon, continued at intervals during the evening and through Saturday morning since then nothing has been heard. So greatly frightened are the occupants that since the bombardment began they have not been sleeping at the house. However, one of them remains at the house at all times during the day.

Minister Out for Mayor.
DUQUOIN, Ill., April 1.—The dry faction of Pickneyville, the county seat of Perry county, have put forward Rev. Malachi Keene, a well known Baptist minister, as their candidate for mayor at the primary election without opposition. The dry candidates for commissioner, three to be elected, are John J. King, Phillip Stout, Clarence Holeman and Enos Williams.

The wet faction has named George E. Hincke for mayor and John C. Neising, Dale Pillars and H. Walker, former deputy sheriff, for commissioners. Pickneyville is now dry territory and Hincke, in defining his position, declares himself unequivocally opposed to blind tigers and bootlegging. Rev. Mr. Keene and Hincke will be the candidates for mayor at the regular election, as neither has opposition.

Man, 72, Alleged Slaver.
MOTT, N. D., April 1.—Benjamin Franklin Gilson, 72 years old, a home-steader near here, was arrested a few days ago charged with violating the Mann white slave act. Mrs. Althea Ross, 64 years old, whom Ross is said to have transported from state to state five separate times, also was arrested. The warrant was sworn to by an older son of Mrs. Ross, who reported the case to Deputy United States Marshal Cameron. Gilson was arraigned before a United States court commissioner at Regent and was placed under $5000 bonds to appear at the session of federal court at Bismarck. The couple came to southwestern North Dakota about seven years ago, taking up adjoining homesteads. It is alleged Gilson brought Mrs. Ross from West Virginia.

CRIMINALS RELEASED MAY PROVE MENACE

CHICAGO, April 5.—Criminals swept Chicago is today finding a new source of danger—criminals, who should be behind the bars, but who through misapplication of the probation law, find themselves free. This misuse of the rule which permits first offenders only to have a second chance comes about in several ways. In many instances, lawyers, misrepresent the status of their clients. In the rush of business, a probation officer accepts the lawyer's word that the prisoner is a first timer. The man on probation mingles back into the life of the city perhaps changes some of his haunts and his home, but continues his career of crime.

Again, the city has only twenty probation officers to deal with hundreds of cases. Half their time must be in court. During the remainder of their day, they are supposed to visit probationers, for the law says they must make this call at least once a month. Five thousand men and women each year go practically free forever under the probation system. Recent disclosures show that in this number are many hardened "habitual" criminals. Hence the city now sees one answer to the epidemic of "stiekups," murders, burglaries and many other crimes with which it is afflicted. And the city literally takes itself home to bed via the middle of the road, lest thugs waylay and assault and rob, perhaps murder.

Men With Brains Needed.
NEWBERG, Ore., April 1.—Pacific college students heard H. W. Stone, general secretary of the Portland Y. M. C. A., describe the opportunities that are open to young men as association secretaries, compare the work with law, education and the trades and make an appeal to college graduates to enter the association field.

Mr. Stone spoke before the entire student assembly. He pointed out the growth of the Y. M. C. A., the increasing demand for associations over the country and the need of men

MRS. ROLAND DICKSON LEADER IN NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., April 3.—Newport is going to rival Palm Beach and Corondo as a winter resort, evidently. This winter a number of fashionable persons have remained here and several of the larger mansions have been opened at intervals. The walking fad is the latest "wrinkle" here and was started by the wives of army officers who accompanied their husbands in the ten mile monthly hike of the latter, prescribed by the government. Mrs. Roland Dickson is one of the devotees of pedestrians. She is seen much afoot and can keep up with the best men walkers, fair heel and toe, for hours. It's a bad thing to be a "good thing."
