Stories From the War Zone

BY WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD, (United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, April 26.—(By Mail to New York.)—Within sixty or seventy miles of the capital are cities, filled with French people who for the past nine months have lived under German rule. What is life like in these towns?

When the Kaiser's hordes swept southward last July on their gigantic attempt against Paris the people of northeastern France heard them coming and fled in vast numbers, scattering to all parts of the country. Many could not flee; many more would not; so the colossal gray flood swept over them and pinned them down and there they are to this day, their daily lives ruled and regulated by orders emanating from the local headquarters of the various German commanders.

Here is a picture of life in St. Quentin under German rule. St. Quentin, a charming French city but little more than an hour's ride on a railway train northward from Paris. The picture was drawn by a French citizen of the place who succeeded in making his escape through the German lines.

"The city was never so bustling as now," the speaker told the correspondent. "Across the square in front of the city hall rapid autos filled with German officers dash in all directions, they are coming from La Fere, from Laon, from Verdun and from Cambrai. Troops are leaving the train at the station, files and drums playing; land wehr patrols come and escorting small groups of prisoners, or relieving the guards in various quarters of the town; a group of townspeople stand reading a notice just posted by German military authorities purporting to quote a Paris newspaper begging for peace: the notice is headed:

"WISE WORDS OF A FRENCH NEWSPAPER"

"Under the gothic arches of the city hall a detachment of landwehr stand sheltered. On the first floor, in the great gala hall a group of municipal councilmen sit, night and day, issuing billets for lodging soldiers and requisitions demanded by the German invaders; the police commissary and his men, in civil attire, but with arm-bands in St. Quentin colors, are held at the disposition of the military."

The German commander's headquarters are at the Credit Lyonnais, the city's largest banking establishment, but part of his administration has headquarters at the second largest bank, the Comptoir d'Escompt.

"The theater houses a company of landwehr. Nearby the restaurant Aigle-Noir has become 'The German Restaurant,' and here the German non-commissioned officers have their mess. The commissioned officers frequent the more imposing cafes and restaurants, this being one of their favorite occupations.

At 5 o'clock the pastry shop, Caneve becomes the rendezvous of the elegants of the army. Spik and span officers in monocles and full regimentals, strut and gossip and devour cakes or group themselves around tiny tables and sip port or cherry with tartes and petitfours.

"But the liveliest tables of all is that at which the Kaiser's fourth son, Prince Auguste, fraternizes with his draper and cracker jokes with his dapper staff-officers."

All these officers live in the pretentious villas bordering the aristocratic Rue Charles-Picard and the rich Champs-Elysees, up and down which streets every morning they caracol upon horses of great pride. The emperor himself when he visited St. Quentin, lived in the old Champs-Baquin home facing the Champs Elysees. This is one of the most elegant private houses in the country.

"The Girls' Seminary has been transformed into a hospital. So has Fervaquees Palace. The Henri Martin school also. They are all overflowing with German wounded and ambulances arrive throughout the day and night.

St. Hilaire Barracks are occupied by landwehr. In the courtyard of this group of buildings all the citizens of St. Quentin who are subject to mobilization, some 5000 in number, must present themselves once a week. These men were surprised by the German advance before their day of mobilization had arrived.

method of advertising open to them, but that nothing compares with newspaper space for getting results, and he believes that this applies with equal force to every other interest which depends on reaching the people. He says that the man who is too modest to advertise, whether he is selling Swiss cheese or Italian grand opera, is too modest to stay in business.

DYSPEPSIA OVERCOME

Tone Up the Stomach with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

When you have dyspepsia your life is miserable. You have a bad taste in your mouth, a tenderness at the pit of your stomach, a feeling of purty fulness, headache, heartburn, and sometimes nausea.

Dyspepsia is difficult digestion—that is what the word means—and the only way to get rid of it is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system. Hood's Sarsaparilla, sold by all druggists, is the one medicine which acts on the stomach through the blood and also directly. Its beneficial effects are felt at once. Improvement begins immediately.

Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, makes the rich red blood that is needed for perfect digestion, and builds up the whole system. No other medicine can take its place.

Even figures that won't lie are sometimes increased in tailor made gowns.

Men Pay Homage to Mother's Friend

"I am not surprised to observe the number of men who come into the store to purchase 'Mother's Friend,'" remarked a leading druggist.

It is a happy thought to send a baby to the drug store. "Mother's Friend" is applied externally over the abdominal muscles.

It is a gentle, soothing lubricant, penetrates to the finenetwork of nerves beneath the skin and has a marked tendency to relieve the muscular strain to which these broad, fat abdominal muscles are subjected. The cords, tendons and ligaments are thus permitted to stretch without the corresponding surface strain so often involved during the period of expectation. This is in part account for the entire absence, in many cases reported, of nausea, morning sickness and other distresses, such as irritation of the epidermis so often the case when this gentle form of lubrication is neglected.

"Mother's Friend" has been highly recommended by a host of women who know from experience and by men who know from observation. Write Bradford Regulator Co., 308 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and we will send you a valuable little book to expectant mothers.
