SAVED FROM LUSITANIA

Helen Smith, Aged Six. This little girl was made happy in Queenstown with a doll after she had lost her mother, father, brother and aunt when the Lusitania went down.

"Everybody is sorry for me because daddy and mamma are gone," said she. "But they will come back. Mamma is coming on the next boat."

The little girl was separated from her relatives after the torpedo struck the vessel. She ran into Edward Cowper, a Toronto newspaper man. He placed her in a boat and she landed safely at Queenstown.

WINS VICTORIA CROSS THROUGH HIS BRAVERY

CHUM ALSO WINS MEDAL BUT HE IS KILLED BY THE GERMAN.

LONDON, May 29.—(By Mail to New York.)—This is a story of heroism—how Sergeant Major Harry Daniels, Second Rifle Brigade, won the Victoria Cross at Neuve Chapelle. It's also a story of another Victoria Cross and a lonely grave back there in northern France. It's a story of two chums who faced death together and fought until bullets cut them down. Corporal Tom Noble is dead. Sergeant Major Daniels told it today from his cot in a big London hospital. "I am more glad about Tom's Victoria Cross than I am about my own," he said. "Poor chap he didn't even know it." And then he told how Tom and himself—inseparable companions since they went out in November—volunteered to cut the wire entanglements of the enemy not fifty feet from the German trenches. Crawling along the dangerous "no man's land" between the trenches they reached the wire. Lying on their backs they started to work.
 "We were hard at it," continued Daniels, "when above the din of machine gun fire I heard a faint voice. 'I'm hit in the chest, old man,' Noble called and those were his last words. He was soon unconscious and died."
 Himself wounded in the hip a few moments later, Daniels crawled a short distance to a shell hole where he rested until night fall. Then he slowly dragged himself toward the British trenches.
 Reading his morning paper today in the hospital Daniels learned that he had won the Victoria Cross. He said nothing, until the man in the next cot asked:

"Your name's Daniels, isn't it? You're Sergeant Major Daniels of the Rifle Brigade. You've got the V. C."

Daniels admitted it. "Yes, I reckon it must be me," he said. And then he told the story.

Today's Oddest Story.

'BELOIT, Wis., June 1.—South Beloit, Ill., isn't.

It's South Beloit, Wis., actually, according to Granville D. Jones, a resident of the University of Wisconsin. Jones was a member of the surveying crew which did the work of the U. S. coast and geological survey in Wisconsin from 1875 to 1890. When Wisconsin was made a state in 1848 the Wisconsin-Illinois boundary was fixed half a mile north of latitude 42 degrees and 30 minutes north. The survey established the fact, according to Jones, that the line which had been accepted as the boundary for over a quarter of a century was anything but straight, and at Beloit it was fully half a mile north of the actual boundary.
 If Jones is right, South Beloit should be in Wisconsin territory. It is highly improbable, however, that any attempt shall be made to have the present line changed.

Astronomer Is Rewarded.

BERKELEY, Cal., May 31.—Professor Armin O. Leuschner, director of the astronomical observatory of the University of California, was notified in a telegram that the Watson medal for astronomical research work has been awarded to him by the National Academy of Sciences now in session at Washington, D. C. Professor Leuschner is the seventh recipient of the honor within 35 years and is said to be the second American to receive the medal.
 S. C. Chandler, editor of the Astronomical Journal, is the other American possessor of the medal.

Miss Mabel Jones, who is to be one of the first of the June brides in Pendleton, was made the motif of a very pretty afternoon tea yesterday by Mrs. Robert Nelson Stanfield at the Stanfield home on Jackson street. Many ladies called during the afternoon.

The rooms were very beautifully decorated in pink and lavender throughout, great clusters and baskets of sweet peas carrying out the color scheme in a floral way. In the receiving line were Mrs. Stanfield, Miss Jones and Mrs. William H. Lytle of Salem. Stationed at the door was the little Miss Barbara Stanfield and another little miss, Thelma Marie Morris, acted as the cupid, announcing the forthcoming marriage of Miss Jones to Dr. David B. Hill by presenting favors in the shape of fans, across the back of which was the date of the wedding day, Sunday, June sixth.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Henry Dixon Jones, Mrs. Clark E. Nelson, Mrs. Frank B. Hayes, Mrs. Richard Mayberry and Misses Edna Zimmerman, Edna Thompson, and Eleanor Vincent. Burroughs, Mrs. James Hill (Helix) and Mrs. Henry Collins. Assisting them in the dining room were Misses Madeline Burgess, Georgianna Fletcher, Thelma Thompson and Esther Shea.

The most pleasing feature of the afternoon was the singing of Mrs. Lulu Pahl Miller, one of Portland's most prominent vocalists. She was accompanied by Mrs. Frank E. Boyden.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY IVANHOE RESIGNS PLACE

DECLARES HE HAS TRIED TO CONDUCT OFFICE IN FAIRNESS TO ALL.

SALEM, May 28.—Today F. S. Ivanhoe resigned as prosecuting attorney for Union county. The resignation, although written and placed in the hands of Salem parties several weeks ago was filed with Governor Withycombe this morning.

The letter to the governor follows: To James Withycombe, Governor, Salem, Oregon.—I hereby tender my resignation as district attorney for Union county, Oregon, to take effect June 1st, 1915.
 Prior to the commencement of the recent case of the State vs. Hodgins, I advised my attorneys I would resign from the office as soon as the supreme court should decide I was entitled to continue as district attorney, as I wished to be relieved of its duties and responsibilities. At the time the case was heard certain pending litigation was unfinished, and the same is now concluded. There exists no present reason for further delay, and the attorney who succeeds me should be appointed before the term of court commencing here June 7th, 1915.

I have held this position since July, 1906, and during this time, have performed its duties without oppression to any and with fairness to all, as I understood my duty and their rights under the law. In all this I have had my critics, and appreciate the support and encouragement I have had at all times from those who know me best. I leave the office with few apologies, and less regrets, hoping none will feel I have betrayed any public confidence and that I may be able to repay in kind.

Jury Falls, Prays, Agrees VANCOUVER, Wash. June 1.—Fervent prayers by members of a jury of three women and nine men, after they had failed to agree and had separated to retire for the night, were followed by a verdict reached in the case of two brothers charged with selling liquor in a dry unit.

The inspiration to appeal for divine guidance apparently struck the body of men and the fairer members of the jury, in another part of the building, at the same time, permission of their respective bailiffs being granted each.

WHEN THE GOAT IS LOOSE.

In baseball above all games, it is bad policy for a team to let its opponents know that the angora is loose. The red Sox were the victim of this fatal mistake the other day. When the Yanks began to land up one of their pitchers they went up into the air. Every player on the team seemed to be in the panic, and Bill Carrigan, the manager, showed by his attitude he felt that everything had gone to pieces. If the Sox had shown less evidence by being shy their nanny the sweat of the Yanks might have ended abruptly. That is one encouraging feature about the Yankees, Wild William Donovan, despite his monicker, is a cool loser. He has his men fighting quietly when the game is going against them. You will never find the Yankee nanny running amuck in a ball park. If Wild William ever loses his goat no one is going to know it.

Several Trenches Taken. PARIS, June 1.—Smashing night attacks delivered against the German positions east of Aix Houlette resulted in the capture of several trenches the war office announced. French troops charged over open ground in the glare of German illuminating bombs and drove the enemy at the point of the bayonet in the face of a heavy fire. A supreme struggle for the positions on the Lorette Hills, dominating the lines to Lens was declared to be in progress.

DR. DARRIN SAYS:

"This is the Last Week for the Afflicted to See Him."

He Closes His Offices in the Hotel St. George Next Sunday, June 6th.

"I have treated so many cases of men's and women's ailments that I know exactly what to do in every instance," said Dr. Darrin recently. "Never is it necessary for me to resort to guesswork. The treatment given is accurate from the very beginning until a cure is effected. By accepting curable cases, and by making no mistakes in treating them, I seldom meet with failures and my patients are not disappointed.
 This will be my last week in Pendleton as I can only remain until next Sunday, June 6th, thus giving every sufferer a final chance to secure my advice or services.
 My going away does not deprive the afflicted of receiving proper and effective treatment, as most all cases can be easily treated at home without the necessity of office treatment, and does not interfere with occupations, or cause loss of time. I give every patient my permanent address and keep in touch with them by correspondence, to advise and send anything that may be required from time to time until they have entirely recovered.
 In this way, many have been restored to health, who otherwise would have continued to suffer miserably or to have gone to an early grave.
 My office consultations and examinations are free at the Hotel St. George during any hour of the day from nine in the morning till nine at night. Each person is seen privately and all delicate matters held sacredly confidential. Those that are skeptical and have no faith in doctors should call and get my opinion regarding their ailments—then judge for themselves whether I understand their case, and worthy of confidence. This will entail no obligation to take treatment."
