Juniors are Given Advice by Seniors How to Conduct Selves

The "faculty of working" and "the working of the faculty" are the two principal things for the coming crop of seniors at the high school to bear in mind, according to Cecil Carl, to whom was commissioned the task of advising the juniors at the recent class day exercises. In his address he said in part:

"As truly as a ship without a crew would drift helplessly and be wrecked at last on some rocky shore, so truly would this high school have drifted and been doomed had not the master minds of the senior class been active during the past year in shaping its policies and directing its activities. We realize this and feel that loyalty to the Pendleton high school demands that we do our utmost to insure its safety during the coming year.

"With this as our motive, we are taking this last opportunity to point out to you members of the junior class your shortcomings and lead you to aspire to things which are noble and becoming a senior. A close examination of your record up to the present time reveals the fact that you lack seriousness, and this in spite of the inspiring example the members of the present senior class have given you. Your childish actions both in the classroom and on the streets would be far more becoming to a kindergarten pupil than to a high school student. You should not hang around in the halls, on the stairs and in the phone room as you have been doing. You should never take part in the rude class scraps which the underclasses indulge in, for you might get some paint on your clothes and, what is more, such things are not becoming to seniors.

"For three years we have watched you flounder through your school work day after day, the perfect personification of ignorance. In fact the perfect happiness that you have shown all this time has led us to believe that if ignorance is bliss you should have for a long time lived in heaven. Juniors, take my advice in the spirit in which it is given and remember that a wise man profits by the mistakes of others and a fool seldom by his own. Do you realize, juniors, that visitors would have left this building several times during the past year thinking they were leaving the state asylum had not the members of the present senior class explained your conduct and thus saved the reputation of the school. It was very humiliating you may be sure. We hope that from now on you will be humble and will cultivate modesty. Don't let a few words of flattery spoken in jest turn your head or give you an inflated idea of your own importance. And above all, don't forget that when you have attained your senior year every one should look up to you except the faculty. Keep in mind always these two things: First, the faculty of working, and second, the working of the faculty, for they are the two things which are going to take you swimmingly through this high school. Of course we would not like to see you take advantage of the latter.

"You juniors are intelligent and now that your shortcomings have been pointed out to you, we trust that you will make every effort to overcome them. We realize that you have a big job ahead of you but, believing that your perseverance is only exceeded by your ignorance, we bid you hope.

"So much in jest. And now, members of the junior class, let me say one serious word. Next year you will be the acknowledged leaders in all student body activities. Next year's activities will succeed or fail as you succeed or fail as leaders. If the class of 1915 can leave one abiding and lasting thought with you let it be this: Loyalty to yourself demands an unselfish loyalty which takes into consideration this high school and this community."

Child Outranks Classics.
EMPORIA, Kan., May 26.—Shakespeare and Byron and others of their class have no really vital message for this day or age. Professor William A. McKeever, head of the child welfare department of the University of Kansas, told the convention of the Kansas State Federation of Women's Clubs. Professor McKeever said the study of the human child holds out many times more promise for the future of the country and gives more culture, refinement and inspiration than can be derived from the classics.

"The millions now butchering one another in the old world have never learned how to live, simply because they have not been taught this universal love for the race through a close study of the growing young," said Professor McKeever.

"Cribbing" Laid to Middles
ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 29.—The entire membership of the first and second classes at the naval academy underwent a re-examination in Spanish because of the suspicious of the academy authorities that the questions prepared for the test had been surreptitiously obtained and made use of by some of the midshipmen.

The suspicious of the officials were aroused through indications that the office of the head of the department of languages where the questions were kept had been robbed. Officials are investigating the case.

Stories From the War Zone

PETROGRAD, May 14.—(By Mail to New York.)—The story of the charmed life of Lieutenant Kallisky, was told here today.

With it was told the bravery of a young Russian student who joined the army when war broke out and how he won three orders of the Cross of St. George.

Kallisky is known as the "orphan gunner."

At Gumbinnen three German batteries concentrated on the gun served by Kallisky and a number of comrades. All the horses and all the men fell but Kallisky. He retired but returned with thirty soldiers and saved the gun. After that the Order of St. George (fourth class) shone on Kallisky's breast.

Kallisky's battery again moved to the vicinity of Goldap where once again the German gunners killed all but Kallisky. He was again reinforced and saved the gun. This time he earned the Order of St. George (third class).

Then came the retreat from the Augustov forest. Kallisky's famous gun became mired and he was forced to spike it and flee. The "orphan gunner" then became a scout. Near Lipka with his brother and two other soldiers Kallisky negotiated a daring reconnaissance across the River Behr. His brother and one soldier were killed but again Kallisky escaped. He returned to headquarters with valuable information and the commander pinned the Order of St. George (second class) on his breast.

Kallisky is still scouting at the front and Petrograd is waiting to hear that he has received the Order of St. George (first class).

LONDON, May 15.—(By Mail to New York.)—The hero medal record of the war belongs to the First Royal Berkshire.

Men of this famous regiment had been decorated before but the crowning achievement of its glory came when King George decorated seven members simultaneously for distinguished conduct under fire. The feats of gallantry were performed at different times. Heading the list of the gallant seven is Acting Corporal Henry Day who left a trench in Northern France under heavy fire to obtain water for a wounded man. Though wounded he filled his canteen safely and aided his companion to drink before his wound weakened him into unconsciousness.

Second comes Acting Corporal held a forward trench against overwhelming odds, so tenaciously that the Germans concluded it was held in force and drew off. Acting Sergeant William Winter is next. Winter left his trench under fire and recovered a machine gun which had been buried by a shell. He then worked the gun unaided and repulsed a detachment of the enemy. Acting Corporal Nalen and Lance Corporal C. G. Hill followed in order while they received

NEW STEEL BARREL RIVALS THE OLD "COAL-OIL" CAN

The world-wide fame of the old Standard Oil 5-gallon kerosene can, which has long been a familiar sight in practically every section of the globe, seems in a fair way to be duplicated by a 15-gallon steel barrel which the Standard Oil Company (California) recently adopted for the convenience of its Zerolene customers," said Col. E. H. Herrill, Manager Lubricating Oil Department for the oil company, while calling on the local agent, Mr. L. B. Dewitt, recently.

"Salesmen's reports indicate that these barrels are going like the proverbial hot cakes. Of course they will not be put to the various uses that fall to the lot of the coal oil can, because this barrel is made to be refilled, but from present indications these barrels will soon have made their way to even the most remote points where Zerolene is used."

The barrel in question is fitted with a patent faucet and mounted on a stand, it makes an excellent garage storage tank for motor oil. This fact, and because motorists are fast acquiring the habit of buying automobile supplies in quantity, accounts for the remarkable popularity of this new Zerolene container.

BAUSCHER-FRENCH CARNIVAL GOES TO ATHENA PICNIC

The Bauscher-French Carnival company closed a successful week's business in Pendleton Saturday night and have moved to Athena where they will make a week's stand, taking in the Athena picnic on Friday and Saturday, June 4th and 5th.

While in Pendleton Bauscher and French received many compliments on the fine up-to-date appearance of their carnival plant, as well as the courtesies shown by themselves and their employees.

They carry with them a large modern Carry-us-all or merry-go-round, that is different from anything of its kind ever shown before in Pendleton. It cost $7000, has a capacity of 50 rides and the horses give the riders the effect of steeple-chasing.

As side attractions, they show Bohemian glass blowers, Lanette, the Flying Lady and Black Art, a model mechanical city in operation, and animal show, consisting of Pecary, grave robber, eastern porcupine, snakes of all kinds, alligators, monkey, bear, etc.

Bauscher and French are old timers at the show business and have many additional attractions besides those being carried with them on their present trip. Their carnival is always lighted at night by their own electric light plant.

Bennett Will Meet Man of Own Weight

For the first time in years, Jockey Bennett, the veteran bantam weight scrapper, will meet a man of his own weight at the Oregon theater June 9 when he will step into the ring with Billie Mascott of Portland. They will both weigh in at 118 pounds.

Bennett has entered most of his battles during the last few years under a handicap. The bantams over the west were afraid to tackle him and he was obliged to meet heavy featherweights or lightweights or else go boutless. That he has been able to hold his own against such light-
