PRESIDENT WILSON AND BABY SAYRE PALS AT WINDSOR

LITTLE FRANCIS WOODROW AND HIS GRANDFATHER ENJOYING EACH OTHER.

Youngster is the Principal Personage at Harlakenden House, Even overshadowing His Distinguished Parents—Baby Demonstrates He is Real Boss of Household.

WINDSOR, Vt., July 12.—For the first time in his life "Baby" Francis Woodrow Sayre realized he had a grandfather. An hour's play with his only grandson each morning and another—or more—in the afternoon was a daily and one of the president's chief vacation delights, when he was here recently.

These daily visits were a new experience for both persons concerned. And "Baby" Sayre was the principal personage in "Harlakenden House," even overshadowing his distinguished parents.

The president also realized for the first time the responsibilities of grandfatherhood. He had seen little of either of his grandchildren, Master Sayre nor Miss McAdoo. Although the heir of the Sayres was born in the White House, exigencies of infancy caused his early return to his parent's home at Williamstown, Mass.

"Baby" Sayre demonstrated who was the real boss at the "summer capital." He was not too demonstrative about it, but all the president's family felt the rod of his authority. He was not left alone at any time. He also became quite a pal of Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the president's niece.

Both the president and his grandson are fresh air advocates and the persona of "Harlakenden House" was the favorite retreat of both. Almost every morning, when the weather was not disagreeable, before plunging into his mail, the president and young Master Sayre held a pow-wow. Ticking of ribs and chin of the baby was larded by maternal orders, but "cozy" from the president, such as mild jouncing and bouncing was not barred.

"Everybody at 'Harlakenden House' said that Master Sayre is a model child, as to behavior. No wakeful night hours are black-marked against him.

Mrs. Sayre and the baby plan to remain at Cornish the entire summer, and the president hopes to return again to watch his grandson grow and thrive in this bracing climate.

THE "ZONE" AT FAIR OFFERS NOVEL WAYS OF ENJOYING SELF

THOUSANDS FLOCK TO ATTRACTIONS SPREAD OUT TO ENTICE VISITORS.

BY FRED S. FERGUSON. (United Press Staff Correspondent.)

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—To the last dress! To the last bitter protest of tired feet and fagged bodies; until dancers drop into chairs exhausted and worn; until barker's throats are dry and their voices cracked from hours of shouting and cajoling; until one by one the myriad lights fade out, and standing gaunt against the sky appear only the skeleton outlines of a fairy city.

So San Francisco and its thousands of visitors take their pleasure upon the "Zone," the joy spot of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

It is far into the night. Over the noisy hubbub of voices come the notes of a bugle. They ride upon a breeze heavy with the odor of Japanese rice cakes, pop corn and handy out-door kitchens. Upon a balcony, high above the joy-seeking through a young woman in a such be-braided suit of semi-military cut supplies the lung power for this bugle, summoning all who still have a dance left in their system or are looking for a "reviver" to carry them through another hour. It is a German place is the "fortifying" position, but world's fair crowds are strictly neutral. A giant guardsman in doublet and hose stands forbiddingly before the door. The long upon which he leans, however, is for other purposes than guarding the sacred portals. He is more likely to give you a friendly jab with the working end of the spear to assist you in, if there is any hesitancy.

Across the way the barker for an Irish village bids for patronage against the Teuton fortress. The glories of a nearby alligator farm are mixed with your anticipation of Irish joy, and, towering above you, but a step away is a giant "Mother Eve," of the inevitable Exposition attraction "Creation."

"Zoning" is still new to San Francisco, and is ever new to the endless stream of Americans, possibly for the first time in their lives determined to "see America first."

There is the soft perfume of flowers, the quiet music of numerous fountains, the soft glow of invisible lights, the flutter of the wings of doves. You pass down the long line of palms, heavy with clinging vines and flowers. You quicken your step to keep in time with a band playing just across the way.

But now there is a new sound. You are still within ear-shot of the band, but you no longer hear it. There is a bang and crash. You are at the head of the Zone. A metallic sounding mechanical orchestra bangs out the latest song hit. It is the first thing on the Zone and something which every American knows—a Merry-go-Round. Stretched ahead is a mile of lights, laughing people, noise and action.

Behind you are the works and ideals of America. Before you is America at play.

From this American merry-go-round you may eat, drink and dance your way through the Panama Canal zone, over the ice of the South Pole with Capt. Scott, see educated soldiers of Toyland with its "toy" soldiers towering sixty feet high. There are villages of Australia, and Samon, and, hopping back to our own continent, of Mexico. A step and you are in Japan with fat wrestlers, monkey shows and unnumberable fakirs demanding attention.

While a miniature "Old Faithful" spouts in a miniature Yellowstone Park, there floats up to the broad veranda of the Inn the "oo-la-las" music of the Turkish dancers. There is to be found—in the Orient, not the Inn—Holy Moses, the camel hero of numerous Expositions, the gun spinners and the inevitable line of "Princesses" whose kind was originally made famous by the first "Streets of Cairo."

"Old Faithful" is the end of the Zone. But there is the opportunity for more to eat, drink and a dance before starting to work your way back. One by one concessions close, lights flicker and go out. A fresh, cold breeze comes off the bay. Fog begins to lower, chasing the heavy rice cake fumes. Tired dancers, diving girls and barker step from different shows and join the diminishing crowds. There is nothing more to see, but still the pleasure seekers linger along the deserted thoroughfare. Let's all go home.

But, listen! The bugle! The girl in the braided suit, the giant guardsman, music, the dance. And so, to the last dress!

CALIFORNIA PEOPLE GIVE TO BELGIANS

NEW YORK, July 12.—The great Pacific coast state, California, with a heart bursting beyond its boundaries, was one of the first states in the union to send a complete shipment of food to destitute Belgium, it became known today through the report of the commission for relief in Belgium, with head offices in this city.

And since the donation of that ship loaded with food and supplies for starving Belgium, the people of California have been most liberal in their contributions. Among the most generous contributors were the people of Palo Alto and the students of the Stanford University.

The Stanford students, at the first call for help from across the seas, organized a local relief committee and besides their initial contributions they agreed to make monthly gifts aggregating $400. They have kept this up and only recently the Chairman of the Belgium Relief Commission received a check of $1250 from Mrs. Harris J. Ryan of Stanford University.

"Pa," said Johnny, who is a persistent knowledge seeker, "what is a lawyer?"

"There isn't any such thing, Johnny," replied the old gentleman, who had been involved in considerable litigation in his time.

"But this book says that somebody was a great lawyer," persisted the youngster.

"Then it's a mistake," rejoined his father.

Girl Stays at Home; Weds.

NEW YORK, July 12.—When Thomas J. O'Neil, president of the Bank of Nutley, N. J., and his family started for their summer home at Valley Falls, N. Y., a few days ago, his daughter, Alice Morris O'Neil, insisted that she had to remain at their Nutley home to do some shopping. The other members left without her and her sister, Elizabeth.

The other morning Alice told her sister that the excuse for remaining at home was merely a pretext, and that in the afternoon she was to wed Frederick Foster Moore, of Nutley, whose father is well known in New York real estate circles.

Accompanied by Elizabeth and John A. Brown, of Belleville, the couple visited the rectory of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, where they were married by the Rev. William L. Cunningham. They then hurried to New York and sent telegrams asking forgiveness to their parents.

1500 Elk Lodges Invited to Fair

CALIFORNIA PREPARES TO ENTERTAIN 40,000 VISITORS ON ELKS' DAY.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—San Francisco Lodge No. 3, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, is arranging for a "Gala Day" on Tuesday, July 20, 1915, which is known as Elks' Day at the Panama Pacific International Exposition. Already 1400 lodges throughout the United States have been sent a special invitation in which President Charles C. Moore of the exposition extends greetings and a cordial invitation to contribute to the cause of civilization and brotherhood, to which President Moore adds, the exposition itself is devoted.

Forty-five state organizations have already promised their support and all the eastern lodges of Elks who will take part in the grand lodge convention at Los Angeles which closes Friday, July 16, 1915, have been requested that their itinerary be so arranged as will permit of their being in this city on Elks' Day, July 20th. On that day no less than 40,000 visiting Elks and at least as many more of their friends are expected at the exposition, where arrangements have been made for a grand reception and entertainment. In anticipation of this great event and to do their part, the San Francisco lodge has been unusually active and busy that the monstrous gathering will be taken care of to the most minute detail.

Many of the lodges will bring their drill teams and special bands, in order that the event will be one of the big days at the fair—long to be remembered. Over 500 Elks are employed at the exposition, representing over one hundred different lodges; these members of the antlered herd have banded together into what is known as the Jewel City Elks and will on Elks' Day—July 20th—appear in special regalia, and also assist the local lodge in giving the visitors an excellent time.

Escaped Convict Taken

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 12.—John McDonough's boat in a saloon here that he was an escaped convict cost him his liberty after he had floated 100 miles on a raft in the Missouri river to escape.

McDonough was taken to police headquarters in East St. Louis, where he confessed he escaped from Missouri prison farm camp No. 2, two miles east of Jefferson City. He told the police he jumped into the Missouri river, and afterward made a makeshift raft, floating down to St. Charles, Mo. There he stole the clothes of a bather and came to Illinois.
