BOMB EXPERT AND HOLT'S TRUNK OF DYNAMITE

Owen Eagan, Bomb Expert.

Frank Holt, the man who blew up a room in the Capitol at Washington and shot J. P. Morgan, had sufficient dynamite to make bombs for the damage of many public buildings throughout the country. The police of New York found a trunk at a stable and storage warehouse four days after he had made the attempt on the life of the banker. It was shipped by Holt under the name of F. H. Henderson from Central Park, a small village six miles from Glen Cove, where Mr. Morgan lived, to the stable. But it held only seventy pounds of the 120 pounds of explosive known to have been purchased by Holt. Fifty pounds of dynamite are still missing. The trunkful of materials was one of the largest hauls of the kind ever made by the police. More than 125 pounds of explosive were seized, seventy pounds of which were in dynamite alone. The old dark brown trunk contained the following:

One hundred and thirty-four sticks of dynamite, 60 per cent strength; three large tin cans for packing the bombs, two boxes of electric fuses, one of blasting caps, a package of chemical, the nature of which is unknown; a package of sulphur, a coil of fuse, a package of sal ammoniac, a dry battery, boxes of fulminate of mercury and vitriol, a bottle of muriatic acid, a soldering outfit and a tin cutter, and other small articles used in the manufacture of bombs and in handling high explosives. The discovery of the trunk followed the information that Holt for several weeks before the Capitol explosion and the Morgan shooting had occupied a bungalow on the outskirts of Central Park, a little village near Svoisset, and about six miles from Glen Cove, L. I., where he practised target shooting and experimented in bomb making. He lived here under the pseudonym of "Totien."

WOMEN OF NEW YORK ARE BECOMING MOST ARDENT FIGHT FANS

ABOUT 400 OF THE WEAKER SEX HAVE ATTENDED LAST TWO BOUTS.

Gory Encounter, Stopped by the Referee, Witnessed by Fair Ones Who Protest Against Fight Ending Even When the Hopes are Dyed Red From the Blood Spilled.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES. (United Press Staff Correspondent.) NEW YORK, July 14.—Women are becoming some of New York's most ardent fight fans. Each succeeding card, especially the open air variety, finds more and more of the reputed weaker sex occupying seats with the same sang-froid as their supposedly sterner escorts. About 400 have attended each of the last two bouts and they evidenced the same—and sometimes more—interest in the smack of the glove meeting the jaw, than the men. And the conservative individuals who imagine they can't stand the sight of red, red blood is all wrong. Johnny Weissmuller, the Brooklyn impresario, staged a card at Elberta Field a few nights ago that was about the goriest New York fans have seen for moons. The first ten-round affair was stopped by the referee after one of the boys had dyed the ropes with the referee's natty white suit and with red. An awful howl went up when the arbiter called a halt—and it wasn't all done by the men, either. "Outrageous!" commented one shabby gray-haired dame who sat near the ring and nonchalantly smoked gold-tipped cigarettes. "That man had no right to stop that bout; the boy wasn't hurt, he just looked bad. Don't you think so?" she finished, turning to her companion, an elderly man. He nodded assent. The second affair, between Sailor Fred Fritts and Boer Rodell, was even more gory. The referee, however, didn't like to risk the further displeasure of the crowd and let the bout go on. Then in the eighth round when the Sailor went down for the long sleep under a straight right to his bloody visage, the women cheered as loudly as the men. The stately, gray-haired woman applauded.

Jim Corbett, one time king of the heavyweight universe, has a new want-to-be-champion. Jim vows he's a wonder and will be a champion before long. The name of this new menace of Willard's is Tom Cowler and he hails from Sydney, Australia, where Corbett picked him up while on a vaudeville tour. The Australian stands six feet, two and a half inches and hits the scales about 205 pounds worth. Corbett plans to pit him against the second-rate heavyweights for a while to give him a chance to find out how they do it in the states. Then he'll put him against several good boys as a sort of polisher and then Willard, Coffey and the whole gang can hop on Tom's neck whenever they feel like it. This, of course, is all according to Mr. Corbett.

It is dangerous to chase the Russian bear to a standstill.

Bear Jumps from Stage. NEW YORK, July 14.—"Betty," a roller-skating bear performing at the Vailsburgh Amusement Park, frightened an audience of several hundred men, women and children when it suddenly jumped from the stage at the conclusion of the act. Before the animal was captured by Henry A. Miller, who performs with the bear, several women and children were knocked down. No one was injured. The animal was cornered by Miller and led back to its cage. Miller told the police, who were called to the park to quell the excitement, that the bear got away from him as

IT'S a glad day for a tobacco chewer when he finds the Real Tobacco Chew. And when a man uses it himself, finds how good it is, he takes pleasure in letting his friends hear the good news. You get the tobacco solace and comfort. A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!! W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind. (Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.)

False Teeth Cause Death. NEW YORK, July 14.—A set of false teeth caused the death of William Phaze, 33 years old, of 56 West-croft avenue, New Brighton, Staten Island. He swallowed the teeth during a spell of coughing. Everything possible was done to relieve him, but he choked to death. He was an inspector of licenses and was married.

PSYCHOLOGY

One of the best known mental processes is the "law of association of ideas."

Seeing something makes you think of something else.

The retailer takes advantage of this law when he makes window displays of national products at the time they are advertised in this newspaper.

People see the advertisement, and later as they pass by see the goods in the retailer's window.

Whether they buy or not the public form a mental impression.

People standardize that store in their minds as a place that keeps interesting merchandise.
