In Pendleton 38 Years.

Seth M. Richardson is today celebrating the 38th anniversary of his arrival in Pendleton. It was on August 7, 1877 that he dropped down over the hills into the village of Pendleton, coming with his parents and their large family. Pendleton's population numbered only about 250 then and it was a "wild and woolly" town. The outlying country was devoted exclusively to stock raising and Mr. Richardson declares old timers told him that the country was no good for anything else. He has lived to see it develop into one of the richest farm communities in the United States. Mr. Richardson further declares that if he is spared for 28 years more they will all be spent in Pendleton.

MARGUERITE CLARK, THE DAINY AND MAGNETIC LITTLE STAR, IN HER GREATEST TRIUMPH,

"The Pretty Sister of Jose"

The role is one in which every resource and power of the famous little star is brought into effective play and she takes full advantage of her many emotional opportunities. She is saucy, mischievous, coquettish, sorrowful and devoted. The settings and photography are beautiful. Miss Clark is ably assisted by Jack Pickford, the youthful star and brother of the famous Mary.
