Exploits of Long Tom to be Made Poem

HUCKING HORSE OF THE ROUND-UP TO BE IMMORTALIZED IN VERSE.

"Long Tom," redoubtable buckler and leader of the Round-up string of outlaws, is to be immortalized in poetry.

R. C. Warriner of Portland, who used to be in the Pendleton country in the early days, has set for himself the task of telling of the prowess of the pride of the Round-up in metrical verse, and has written to his old friend, J. F. Robinson, for data on the life history and pedigree of "Long Tom."

Warriner has sung the praises of the Round-up in verse before. Two years ago he wrote "The Buckaroo," and last year composed a companion poem entitled "The Buckaroo."

Both were published in the Oregon Journal and the East Oregonian. Mr. Warriner is a great booster for the Round-up and plans on being present this year again.

"Long Tom" before he became a sensation as a buckler, was just a common, ordinary, hard-working farm horse. Some seven or eight years ago he belonged to R. F. Kirkpatrick, well known reservation farmer, and distinguished himself while in the Kirkpatrick service by proving his vicious temper on several occasions. One man received a broken arm from one of his kicks.

Later he became the property of Allen Bros. near Echo and some of his bucking propensities were discovered when farmhands tried to make a saddlehorse of him. O. G. Allen, one of his owners at that time, later became a photographer and took many pictures of his erstwhile farm horse at the Round-up. The J. E. Smith Livestock Co. acquired the animal and worked him to the plow and combine until a few days before the first Round-up when he was brought in for a trial. Though worked down by a season on a combined harvester, the big animal broke made such a showing that Sheriff T. D. Taylor, then director of livestock, purchased him outright. Since that time he has had an easy life, straying in pastures green for eleven months of the year and spending the twelfth at his favorite pastime, bucking.

Comparative Losses of Seven Nations in the War

The losses of Europe in the war up to May 31, as compiled by the French ministry of war, are as follows:

France—Killed, 460,000; wounded, 660,000; prisoners, 180,000; total 1,299,000.

Germany—Killed, 1,630,000; wounded, 1,880,000; prisoners, 90,000; total, 4,350,000.

England—Killed, 181,000; wounded, 200,000; prisoners, 90,000; total, 471,000.

Belgium—Killed, 49,000; wounded, 49,000; prisoners, 15,000; total, 113,000.

Russia—Killed, 1,250,000; wounded, 1,680,000; prisoners, 850,000; total, 3,780,000.

Austria—Killed, 1,610,000; wounded, 1,865,000; prisoners, 910,000; total, 4,385,000.

Turkey—Killed, 110,000; wounded, 144,000; prisoners, 95,000; total, 349,000.

Totals—Killed, 5,290,000; wounded, 6,478,000; prisoners, 2,529,000; grand total, 14,297,000.

This table was prepared for publication early in June, but was withheld because the French authorities feared the enormity of the figures might have a bad moral effect on the people. The computations, while probably not exact, may be considered the most complete record of losses so far put together. The losses of Serbia are not available, but as that country has suffered from plague in addition to war they must be large.

The largest total loss is charged to Austria-Hungary, the largest proportionate loss to Belgium. Enough persons have been killed to populate a country like Sweden.

Since May 31 there have been many violent battles to swell the totals given—the French offensive north of Arras, where 15,000 are said to have been slain, the Austro-Italian engagements, the great battle in Galicia and the German offensive in the Argonne.

The most astounding feature of this table is the ratio of killed to wounded. In previous modern wars the number of wounded has been to the number of dead as four or five to one. Here the two categories are much more nearly equal. Many of the wounded have joined their regiments, but many are crippled for life. The sick, who have been numerous in all the armies, are not listed here.

 At 5 o'clock the barometer stood at 29.44, having fallen from 29.63 at noon.

350 ACRES OF GRAIN AND 4 HEAD OF HORSES BURNED

WALLA WALLA, Aug. 17.—About 350 acres of standing grain, 650 acres of stubble in which was piled at settings, the sacked grain from that area, two headers and four head of horses, were destroyed by fire on the H. H. Hungate and son ranch in Spring Valley, about 12 miles northwest of the city, yesterday afternoon.

The loss has been roughly estimated at from $25,000 to $40,000, this being the biggest grain fire of the season. It is believed that the grain was well covered by insurance.

The fire started about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when a gas engine was being moved from one setting to another. Mr. Hungate was in the midst of harvesting at the time and still has left standing about 250 acres of grain set to be cut and threshed.

All the loss was not suffered by the Hungates, the fire having swept clear across the road into another field, the owner of which was not learned last night, although it is believed to have been the Stonecipher place. The fire was soon checked after it had crossed the road, however, so that the loss there was not nearly so great.

About 50 acres of bunch grass on the Max Zarger farm burned.

Some Stacked Grain Saved.
 Hundreds of men rushed to the scene to assist in fighting the blaze, but many arrived too late to be of any assistance. When the fire began sweeping across the stubble, teams were put to work plowing in front of the fire while men fought hard around the settings to save the stacked grain there. By their efforts a good deal of the grain was saved, it being impossible to tell last night how badly the various piles had been burned, it being dark before the fire-fighters could stop for a breath.

Horses Burned at Plow.
 While one of the men was driving a big, slight horse plow team across the field, passing through the fire line, four of the horses lunged away when the blaze was under them and so entangled the other four that they were burned to death in the harness before help came, the driver having to run for his life.

GIRL STRUCK BY AUTO.

LA GRANDE, Ore., Aug. 17.—Dus, almost entirely, to the fact that the machine was running at less than six miles an hour, bystanders agree is the fact that the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rees of Cove, is alive today. The little one darted out from behind a string of parked cars in front of the Toggerly late Saturday evening and collided with the Conker car, driven by Glen Conker, the well known high school athlete. The blow knocked the child unconscious and left the body lying in such a way that the wheels straddled her, one of the fortunate turns of events. She recovered consciousness about midnight and except for several bad skin bruises, is fully restored to her normal condition today.
