Beautiful, But Broke, or How She Lost $6,000,000

MRS. MAUDE BREVOORT BARCLAY

The strange story of the loss of $6,000,000 by a New York society beauty came out in court the other day when a judge fined her $250 for contempt in failing to explain why she could not pay a debt of $100,000. The alternative for the fine is imprisonment, for despite the general belief to the contrary, they still imprison for debt in New York City and state.

It developed that Mrs. Barclay had filed a petition in bankruptcy, and that practically all her great fortune was gone.

Where the well-known society leader's $6,000,000, represented by large holdings, was vanished was explained by her lawyer, Norman W. Kernogod. He said Mrs. Barclay, like many other social leaders, had entrusted her business affairs to

CUBAN ARMY IS READY TO HELP IF WAR COMES

300,000 TROOPS ARE AVAILABLE TO ASSIST THE UNITED STATES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—Should the United States become involved in war, a Cuban army 300,000 strong will be found fighting for the Stars and Stripes with the same devotion with which it would defend its own flag, declared General Enrique Loynaz del Castillo, commissioner-general of Cuba, speaking at the Pan-American ceremonies of the International Students' Federation here.

"Cuba," said the general, "has deemed it her duty to make herself strong enough to be able to defend herself against any power in the world. She can not only raise an army of 300,000 men, but can equip it with arms and maintain it in the field. If any day the United States, to which we owe so great a debt of gratitude, goes to war, the army will be at her disposal."

General Castillo declared that the people of Porto Rico are not dissatisfied with their present relations with the United States and would be glad to be admitted to the union as a state, but would be made still happier to be made an independent republic.

Of Haiti, the Cuban general expressed the hope that the United States will not only establish a stable government there but will clean up the country and establish modern institutions as it did in Cuba, and leave it strong and independent.

SUCCESSFUL RAISING OF POULTRY CAN BE DONE ON SMALL AREA

BIRDS PARTICULARLY ADAPTED TO SUBURBS OF CITIES AND SMALL TOWNS.

Waste Products of the Kitchen and the Table May Be Used to Advantage—There is Always a Market for Eggs and Dressed Poultry—How to Manage Successful Yard.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Poultry can be kept successfully on a small amount of land, for this reason, it is particularly adapted to suburbs of large cities and to small towns. The waste products of the kitchen and the table may be used to advantage and there is always a market for eggs and dressed poultry, or, if used at home, the consumer is certain that he has a strictly fresh product.

When many birds are kept in a small space, however, the ground is likely to become foul. It is, therefore, advisable to divide the lot and sow part of it with some quick growing grain such as oats, wheat, or rye. In this way the yards may be rotated every three or four weeks during the growing season, the hens being turned on the growing grain when it is a few inches high. A good combination is oats and wheat in equal parts sowing six or seven bushels to the acre.

For the poultry house, about four square feet of floor space per bird should be allowed for the general purpose breeds. The other essentials are fresh air, dryness and sunlight.

Birds that are too fat will lay few eggs. It is, therefore, advisable to make them work for most of their feed by scratching in the litter of which there should be about four inches on the floor. A good feed mixture is a scratch ration composed of equal parts of corn, wheat and oats and one part each of bran, middlings and corn meal. Feeding about equal quantities of the scratch ration and of mash. This should be scattered in the litter morning and noon, allowing a small handful for every three hens. At night the birds should be given all they can eat of it in a V-shaped trough. In the winter time, some green feed should be given at noon—cabbage or mangel-wurzels are good. If the birds do not eat all the grain that is scattered in the litter, reduce the quantity. Grit, oyster shells and water should be available for the birds at all times.

What It Costs to Raise a Cow. There are over 21,990,000 dairy cows in the United States and these cows must be replaced every few years. The cost of producing the heifers that will keep up the supply is, therefore, a matter of great importance to dairymen. Recent investigations by the department of agriculture indicate that in good dairy sections it is profitable to raise only the best heifers and that, except on cheap land or under very favorable conditions, the raising of scrubs does not pay. On the other hand, the dairy farmer who raises well bred stock finds a home market for the feeds grown on his farm, maintains the fertility of his land, and can ultimately dispose of his heifers at a profit.

The department's specialists found that in Wisconsin and in other dairy districts in the north and east where land and feed values are much the same, at the end of a year it has cost on an average of $39.53 to raise a dairy calf and at the end of two years, $41.41. Of this amount, nearly two-thirds was for food, the market value of which was charged against the heifer. Labor formed about 12 per cent of the total, and the remainder was charged against interest, equipment and the use of buildings, the share of the general expense for the entire farm business, and losses by death, etc. These items are usually overlooked in estimating costs, but they must be met in some way.

This estimated cost, of course, may be greatly reduced in sections where feed is very cheap or where pastures are available for the great part of the year. In good dairy sections, however, well-bred heifers two years old are worth considerably more than $50 and, furthermore, it is difficult for dairymen to buy productive cows at a reasonable price. They are, therefore, more or less compelled to raise their own stock. In view of the expense of raising heifers at all, it is desirable that they should confine themselves to good stock.

A good many nice men will display murderous instincts when it comes to killing time.

Nude Baby Bathers Cause Big Split in Rich Summer Colony

CLEMENCY & ROSEMARY HALE

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Two little naked children playing in the sand in the Atlantic ocean have Second Cliff, an exclusive summer resort, split today. They are the offspring of Mrs. Beatrice Forbes Robertson Hale, and are known as the "Suffrage Twins" because of the suffrage activities of their mother, who is a sister to Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, the noted English actor.

Mrs. F. P. Tague, one of the members of the colony, which is situated near Situate was one of the first to voice an objection against the children appearing on the beach without their clothes.

According to the mother, the children were but thirteen months old, appeared but a few minutes in their birthday suits, merely while their little bathing suits in which they are usually clad were being dried.

Several women who saw the twins in their naked state said that it had a decided depressing effect on the morals of the other children.

Miss Edith Haley, popular young bride-elect of Lester Hurst, was honored this morning by a charming though informal breakfast party and handkerchief shower given by Miss Jeward at her home on South Main street. Twelve young lady friends were the guests.

Mrs. R. Raymond and Miss Helen Raymond have returned from the Raymond farm north of the city where they spent a portion of the summer.

Mrs. Carolyn Round is home after spending a few weeks in Portland and at the coast.

Mrs. Anna McIntyre and Misses Laura and Belle McIntyre of Athena have been in the city during the week attending Archie McIntyre who is ill at St. Anthony's hospital.

Mrs. Claude L. Barr has returned from a vacation of two weeks spent at Seaside and Portland.
