Bear Struggles in Zoo. PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 25.—Catching his head in an interspace between the bars of his pit and the stone walk surrounding it, "Solomon," a six-months old grizzly bear cub at the Zoological Gardens, strangled himself to death in his efforts to escape from the place where he was born and which had been his only home since birth.

Grizzly bears, according to the Zoo authorities, are not generally climbers. Hence the keepers coming to work at daybreak were attracted to the pit by the agonized squeals of the "baby."

They were obliged to fight off his mother before they could do anything to effect his rescue. When finally released to situation had been too much for him, and he was dead. When his body fell to the floor of the pit, fifteen feet below, his mother licked it affectionately. "Solomon" was the "runt" of a litter of cubs that included one brother and one sister.

With this aim in view farmers are asked to fill out the blank below as soon as their harvesting has proceeded sufficiently to give them an accurate line on what the yield will be.
