Gold and Silver Embroidery Quite the Thing in Styles

BY MARGARET MASON.
(Written for the United Press.)
Oh you metallic maid
You've a heart of gold I ween
And the glory of your hair
Has a burnished copper sheen
Cloth of gold and silver gauze
Fashion's fabric for the Fall,
Trim your garments everyone,
Frocks and hats and wraps without
Silver threads among the gold
Means naught old—it's very new,
You are on your mettle, dear,
And much metal is on you.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The fall fashions are simply metaliferous if you ask me. More husbands are used to the alchemy that turns their perfectly gold and silver into frills and furbelows for the fair sex but now lo and behold, frills and furbelows are turned into gold and silver. In the early showing of fall models there is hardly a hat, a wrap or a frock that doesn't flaunt a bit of galloon, a glitter of gold and silver embroidery, or a twist and fold of lustrous metallic gauze about it somewhere.

For evening gowns the metallic materials are most effective, especially the gorgeous brocades of old blue and gold, silver and old rose and many wondrous color combinations. They look like products of the looms of romance and seem to give the lie to the broad hint that pastel tints would be the only thing in the color line for the coming season. These magnificent metallic materials are naturally made up on the simplest straight lines, depending solely on their own beauty for adornment.

The princess lines that are already casting their careful shadows before are perfect when carried out in these fantastic fabrics. The straight hung medieval effects are also good. Obviously these gorgeous garments are to be worn only by the most stately and Amazonian of the sex but let not the petite and clinging vine despair. She may metallize as well by touching up a frothy frock of net with high lights of gold or silver gauze.

Such a fascinating confection is an evening gown of white tulle. The multi-layered skirt has its inner layer bound around its ankle length with a fold of silver gauze while the shorter outer layer is caught up in little effect on each side with a cluster of silver gauze garlands. The bodice consists of a wisp of the tulle over each shoulder a wide garland of the silver and a spray of the silver blooms at the corsage. A more delectable costume were hard to imagine unless it be a vision of bluish rose tulle whose fluffy skirt is caught high up on the left side with long loops of purple velvet ribbon over a petticoat of gold gauze. A wide garland of the gold is held in its proper place by a tuff of the tulle over one shoulder and a band of the purple over the other.

Embroidery in gold and silver threads and steel and copper beads is another favorite method of transmuting metals into garments and in deed a most striking one in connection with the lustrous velvets that are to be made for fall and winter wear. Cunning little velvet hats like the bell crowned heavers of the beauty of old have huge made buckles of gold or silver gauze and hat bands of the same. Flat velvet shapes in black or purple with wreath of bright colored yarn flowers combined with gold and silver fruits are a dazzle of gorgeousness. They are simply bound to go to your head. Most of them are bound in metallic material too.

The elaborate afternoon gowns and suits for autumn are most invariably shown in redingote or full skirted Russian coat models with wide bands of fur around the skirts of the coats, the cuffs and the collars and always a gleam of gold or silver picked out on the velvet or satin of the principal fabric. Velvet in combination with broadcloth, serge, satin or chiffon forms all the smartest suits and ever is there fur and the metal mark.

You certainly have to look like ready money this fall to be in style so if you are short on cash but have a heart of gold you'd better wear it on your sleeve.

Haitian Landing Opposed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—One company of American marines has landed at St. Marc, Haiti, and taken control of the town. An attempt to oppose the landing failed.

The navy department issued this statement: "Admiral Caperton has reported that the U. S. S. Cassin landed one company of marines at St. Marc, Haiti, and has assumed control of that town. The occupation of St. Marc will serve to guard the food supply of the city of Port au Prince. "An attempt was made to organize an armed opposition to the landing force but this effort was not successful and some dissatisfied Haitians with arms left for the mountains before the landing occurred."

South Steel Business Booms.
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 27.—Steel mills and machinery factories all over the south are being run on a capacity schedule. The greatest business in years is the report.

Post Telegraphers Compete.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—D. J. Ellington, present holder of the world's championship for telegraph operators, will defend his title against telegraphers from all parts of the world, participating in the international telegraphers' tournament. The Carnegie diamond medal and valuable gold prizes will be awarded to the winners. The events will include sending and receiving contents by broker, press and railroad operators.

GIRL'S ASSAILANT IS CAPTURED AT BAKER

SUSPECT IDENTIFIED DECLARES THRESHOLD TRIED TO LYNCH HIM.

BAKER, Ore., Aug. 27.—Exhibiting a welt around his neck, the stranger who, it is charged, attempted to attack Eleanor, the 19 year old daughter of Sidney Storie, a rancher near Weatherby, told Sheriff R. P. Anderson that the mark was caused by a rope in the hands of his captors.

This is not credited because the band of threshers, led by Mr. Storie, who captured him, turned him over to Deputy Sheriff Robert Nelson without protest, and there were no indications the party had a rope. The man gave his name as Fred Reno of San Francisco, Calif. He said he would waive preliminary examination and District Attorney Godwin will have him arraigned. Reno wore tennis shoes with corrugated soles and the shoe marks near the attempted assault are said to match them.

Miss Storie says Reno is the man who ordered her to dismount from her horse, but the frightened animal plunged and caused her escape.

BRITAIN HAS CONTROL OF WAR SUPPLY PLANTS

PARIS, Aug. 27.—The government now has under control all factories able to produce cannon, rifles, projectiles and explosives, said David Lloyd George, British minister of munitions in an interview with Charles Humbert.

"It also controls all foundries and machine and tool factories and not a pound of metal or detached piece is turned out by this vast industrial machine which is not destined for the use of our armies. This war must not be fought with brawny chests, but with machinery."

Gambling Crusade Waits.

SEATTLE, Aug. 25.—The recent flight of Harry I. Dunaway, cashier of the Northern Pacific ticket office, alleged to have embezzled $2000 from his employer, and who left a note saying he had gambled away the money in places which he named has brought a crisis in the crusade against gambling houses.

Prosecuting Attorney Lundin says he has been unable to get the sheriff and chief of police to help him close the gambling places. Chief of Police Lang declares that gambling has been almost suppressed.

Albany Courthouse Has Fire.

ALBANY, Ore., Aug. 27.—County Judge McKnight probably averted a serious fire in the hall of the court house. The janitor had placed some paper under a cuspidor and it is believed that somebody accidentally dropped a lighted match on it. The fire was on fire when Judge McKnight discovered it.

Cadet Ship Is Fogbound.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—The Taisei Maru, a Japanese merchant marine training ship, arrived here, 12 days out of Kobe, Japan. She stood off the harbor since Tuesday, unable to pick up a pilot because of the dense fog.

BULGARIAN CAPITAL BECOMES CENTER OF WORLD-WIDE LOBBY

SOPHIA SUDDENLY ASSUMES SPECTACULAR "PLACE IN THE SUN."

Nation Holds Future of Europe in its Palm for Upon the Decision of Bulgaria the Results of the Present Struggle are Conceded by Diplomats to Rest.

BY HENRY WOOD.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
SOPHIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 2.—(By Mail.)—From the spick and span, but none the less modest little Balkan capital, Sophia has become the center of the world's greatest lobby, and the lobby for the greatest thing in the world—victory in the present war.

By the vicissitudes of the present great European conflict and her peculiar geographical position Bulgaria has come more than any one other to hold an influence over the future destinies of all Europe.

Were Bulgaria suddenly to join the allies and falling on the back of Turkey capture Constantinople from the rear, the allies could at least pass the Dardanelles and carry to Russia the help in supplies and munitions that might quickly turn the whole current of the war in their favor.

If Bulgaria continues neutral, the possibility of the capture of Constantinople from the Chatalja line is removed and the eventual passage of the Dardanelles if not rendered impossible will be so indefinitely delayed as to enable Germany in the meantime to follow up her successes against Russia and turn the whole current of the war in her favor.

This, at least, is the way the great European powers now involved in the conflict view the situation and that is why the lobby is here.

In Europe they do not call it lobbying. It passes under the more polite term of diplomacy. In reality, however, there is not a method nor a tactic known to the most common of the most distinguished lobbyist at Washington or any American state capital that is not being used to win over the various members of the Bulgarian cabinet, the members of parliament, the political leaders, the heads of the army and even Czar Ferdinand and the Queen and the crown prince themselves. It may be that diplomacy and lobbying are merely the European and the American terms for the one and the same thing or it may be that the issue at stake is so great that the exalted and dignified diplomacy of Europe has been reduced to the methods and practices of the vulgar and most common of American lobbyists.

The lobby is naturally divided into two great camps, that of Germany, Austria and Turkey, and that of England, Russia, Italy, Serbia and France. To the regularly accredited diplomatic representatives of these countries there has been added a whole army of special diplomatic and other agents, every one of whom has been selected with an eye to his special qualifications either for winning over some special individual or for wielding some special influence on the Bulgarian government as a whole.

Both camps have now made more of less concrete propositions to Bulgaria. Germany, Austria and Turkey have told her that if she will remain neutral till the end of the war they will give her all of Serbian Macedonia, which after all is the one thing Bulgaria most desires. This offer presumes a final victory for Germany in which event Serbia would become an Austrian province and would have nothing to say as to the disposition of her territory. Minor inducements also have been included in the German offer.

The allies on their part in exchange for Bulgaria's participation in the war and her capture of Constantinople from the rear have offered:

1. The bulk of what remains of the Turkish empire in Europe including the city of Adrianople which the Bulgarians captured in the first Balkan war but lost in the second.
2. Portions of Serbian Macedonia which Serbia, it is hoped, at the request of the allies will cede.
3. The best efforts of the allies to secure from Greece and Roumania the cession of those territories which were taken from Bulgaria at the close of the second Balkan war.

In response to these offers Bulgaria has frankly admitted she is in the market not necessarily to the higher bidder but to the one who will give her the most solid guarantees that the promises made will be carried out; or rather, she demands that in as far as possible, her compensation be given her in advance in order that there be no short change operations after the war such as she alleges were perpetrated at the close of the Balkan wars. She has expressed her readiness to treat with both sides and it is this open, receptive attitude that has resulted in the massing here of the great lobby.

LEWIS RELINQUISHES WORK ON HIGHWAYS

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 27.—Governor Withycombe and State Treasurer Kay won their fight to make E. L. Cantine the actual state highway engineer when John H. Lewis, state engineer, made a proposal of withdrawal from highway work.

While declining to concur in the interpretation of the highway law, announced by Governor Withycombe and State Treasurer Kay, Mr. Lewis said if the commission would enter an order relieving him of all duties in connection with the work and from giving a $10,000 bond he would withdraw from all connection with it.

It was announced that the governor and state treasurer would vote for an order which will be introduced at a meeting of the commission in accordance with Mr. Lewis' proposal and directing Mr. Cantine to furnish a bond of $10,000.

Mr. Lewis said he had always been willing to retire from the position of highway engineer provided he was assured by the commission that his interests would be protected. Mr. Kay recalled that he had on several occasions informed Mr. Lewis that the board would enter an order protecting him providing he turned the highway work to the chief deputy, as was intended by the legislature when it passed the amendment to the highway law consolidating the state highway department with that of the state engineer.

Conquest Opponents Rise.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—A manifesto against annexation of conquered territory by Germany addressed to the German chancellor by committees of the social democratic party and the socialist groups in the Reichstag is published by Humanite.

The document points out that the party joined the present struggle with the rest of the German people to defend national existence and independence, not to make conquests. "Every infringement by force," it says, "of the autonomy and independence of the people contains the germs of future wars and implies in itself a dangerous coalition of enemies against Germany."

Buildings are Razed as Wind Sweeps Valley

CALIFORNIA TOWNS SUFFER HEAVILY—CLOUDBURST ADDS TO DAMAGE.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—Beginning at Yuma, an electrical storm, accompanied by high winds and a heavy rain, swept up the Imperial valley and expended its energy in the San Bernardino mountains, nearly 200 miles from its starting point.

Telephone and telegraph wires were temporarily put out of commission. Film structures were unroofed or blown down.

The Southern Sierras Power company reported that three of its high-tension lines, carrying current at 33,000 volts, from the mountains to the Imperial valley, were burned out.

Cloudburst Does Damage.

At Tecate, about 30 miles east of San Diego, near the Lower California border, a cloudburst was reported to have destroyed a number of adobe buildings.

At various points the wind attained velocities of from 45 to 50 miles an hour. Yuma and Imperial valley points reported that temperatures dropped 30 degrees in a few minutes, followed by a downpour of rain which amounted approximately to half an inch in a brief time. At most places the storm lasted but an hour.

El Centro reported a heavy dust storm preceding the rain, but no damage was done either to buildings or crops.

Yuma plant Unroofed.

At Yuma the secondary, or heat-proof roof of a refrigerator plant was blown off.

Calexico reported that the temperature dropped from 104 degrees to 75. At San Bernardino, where the storm was preceded by a period of oppressive heat, the thermometer fell from 102 to 72 in a few minutes. San Bernardino, Riverside and Redlands all suffered from interruptions of telegraph and telephone communication. Imperial valley points were isolated temporarily, while telegraph wires into Arizona were out of commission for several hours.

Several Boxes Required.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 27.—Seven and a half million is the estimated number of orange boxes used annually in Florida, one third of which have just been contracted for by a local lumber company. The shipment of these boxes begins in October and extends through to the following April.

Corn on the Cob —the Roasting Ear

Is not more delicious than the

New Post Toasties

In the growth of corn there is a period when the kernels are plumped out with a vegetable milk, most nutritious (roasting ears). As it slowly ripens this hardens and finally becomes almost flinty.

This nutritious part of the corn is cooked, seasoned, rolled thin, and toasted by a new process which enhances the true corn flavour.

Different from ordinary corn flakes, the New Post Toasties have a distinctive form and flavour; and they keep their appetizing crispness, even after cream of milk is added.

These Superior Corn Flakes come oven-fresh in tight wax-sealed packages; and they cost no more than ordinary "corn flakes." Insist upon having
