LOW WAGES CAUSE INDUSTRIAL UNREST DECLARES COMMITTEE AFTER MAKING INVESTIGATION

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—"We find the basic cause of industrial dissatisfaction is due to low wages, or, stated in another way, to the fact that workers of the nation through compulsory or oppressive methods, legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil."

Declaring that the extent and depth of industrial unrest can hardly be exaggerated, Chairman Walsh, of the industrial relations committee today announced this finding in a report which was concurred in by Commissioners John B. Lennon, Jas. O'Donnell and Austin B. Garretson. Walsh pointed out the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few, charged oppression and violence by employers and the turning of courts, legislatures and governors to defeat justice. The unrest described was declared to be the "latest manifestation of the age long struggle of the race for freedom of opportunity, of every individual to live a life to its highest ends."

Congress and the people of the nation were urged to give the findings and conclusions of the report "the most earnest consideration to the end that evils which threaten to defeat American ideals and destroy the well-being of the nation may be generally recognized and effectively checked."

Chairman Walsh's report follows: "Charged by your honorable body with the investigation to discover the underlying causes of dissatisfaction in the industrial situation, we present the following findings and conclusions: "We find the basic cause of industrial dissatisfaction to be low wages, or, stated in another way, to the fact that workers of the nation through compulsory or oppressive methods, legal and illegal, are denied the full product of their toil."

"We further find that unrest among workers of industry has grown to such proportions that it already menaces the social good will and peace of the nation. Citizens numbering millions smart under the sense of injustice and oppression born of conviction that opportunity is denied them to acquire for themselves and their families that degree of economic well-being necessary for the enjoyment of material and spiritual satisfaction which alone make life worth living.

"Bitterness, bred of unfulfilled need for sufficient food, clothing and shelter for themselves, their wives and children has been further nourished in the hearts of these millions with resentment against the arbitrary power that enables the employer, under our present industrial system to control not only the workman's opportunity to earn his bread, but oftentimes through the exercise of this power to dictate social, political and moral environment. With the thwarting of human passion for liberty and the solitude of the husband and father for his own, modern industry is kindled with a spirit in these dissatisfied millions that lies deeper and springs from nobler impulses than physical need and human selfishness. Among these millions and their leaders we have encountered a spirit, religious in fervor and willingness to sacrifice for a cause held sacred. We earnestly submit that only in the light of this spirit can the aggressive propaganda of the discontented be understood and judged.

The report points out that ministers, professors, writers and others have come to the support of the militant labor campaign recently and continues: "We find the unrest herein described to be but the latest manifestation of the age-long struggle of the race for freedom of opportunity for every individual to live its life to the highest ends. As the nobles of England wring independence from King John and as the tradesmen of France broke through the ring of privileges enclosing the three states, so today millions who serve society in arduous labor on the highways aloft on scaffolding, or by the sides of whirling machines are demanding that they, too, and their children enjoy all the blessings that justify and make beautiful this life."

COUNTRY LIFE FAST GOING IN ENGLAND BECAUSE OF THE WAR

CASTLES, MANOR HOUSES AND MANSIONS ARE BEING PUT UP FOR SALE.

Traditional English Country Gentleman is Quitting—Fox Hunt Is Forfeaken and the Devotee Is Either at the Front or Else Trying to Cut Down Expenses.

BY WILBUR S. FORREST. LONDON, Aug. 17.—(By mail.)—This is the open season for castles, manor houses and mansions in England.

The traditional English country gentleman is quitting. He's hanging out signs which say: "For Sale," or "For Rent."

Country life in England, for which England is famous, is one of the real victims of war. The country gentleman has forsaken the fox hunt, the shooting and fishing, coaching and golf. He's either off to the battlefield or he's cutting down expenses and hundreds of him are quitting for good.

If an American millionaire, out hunting for something in castles or manors, should visit the real estate agents in England today he would find the British castle and manor market overstocked with a still heavier supply of mansions and smaller varieties of aristocratic strongholds. He would find them abutting the Thames near London stretched along the shores of the historic Avon and dotted here and there from the vicinity of the beautiful Midway in Kent to the Severn on the English west coast. He would find them in North England, Scotland and Wales, and could have his choice from among twenty types of architecture, historic and modern. He could rent them or buy them with a dozen to thirty bedrooms and with a dozen to thousands of acres to be used for recreation or sports.

If this American millionaire doubted that the business of being an English country gentleman is getting unpopular he could motor two hours from London and find a great Georgian mansion with 4500 acres that abounds in choice hunting and fishing. The acres and the mansion are for sale or for rent. He could take a train to Berwick-on-Tweed in Berwickshire and find an historic old castle with its 4618 acres stretched along the Whitadder with its fishing its hunting, its three packs of hounds, its 18 hole golf course, deer parks and drives, for sale, bag and baggage, or for rent. Or if this did not suit, he could return to London, re-enter his motor and spin for an hour to the north of the metropolis where he would find a magnificent Elizabethan mansion, of 18 bed and dressing rooms, salons, halls, spacious dining and drawing rooms, with its 2500 acres divided into a wilderness of shrubberies and lawns, old cedar avenues, terraced walks and timbered parks, its lodges, stables and garages—for sale at a bargain. He could travel to the Midlands near Birmingham and Sheffield and find three of the best bargains in manor houses in England. He could take his choice of a magnificent Tudor manor house in Worcestershire with its luxury of reception rooms fifteen bedrooms, and all other things that generally go with English manor houses; or a great manorial estate not far away of 2000 acres, advertised as having the "best fishing in England," or another historic manor in the same neighborhood with its eighteen bedrooms, reception rooms, billiards, hunting and golf, all surrounded by 250 acres that must be sold, to someone.

A trip into South Downs, one hour from London, would find a stately mansion of the old Sussex Yeoman style with its adjoining lodges, cottages, timbers, parks covering 500 acres.

Another short jaunt from London would find another great Elizabethan mansion advertised for sale cheap as follows. Twenty bed and dressing rooms, stabling, garages, all other appurtenances with shooting lands of 3500 acres, a deer park of 200 acres—for sale at a bargain.

Two great English country estates will go under the auctioneer's hammer in September. They've been on the market for months and falling of purchases will be cut into farms. One is in the center of the Blackmoor Vale near Sherborne. Its great manor contains a wealth of luxurious fittings. The estate is 5400 acres that will be converted to agriculture.

The great residential agricultural shooting estate known as Etsted Hall, Essex, near Braintree, of 3396 acres, is the other.

These are only a few of the "For Sale," or "For Rent," signs in the British Isles today.

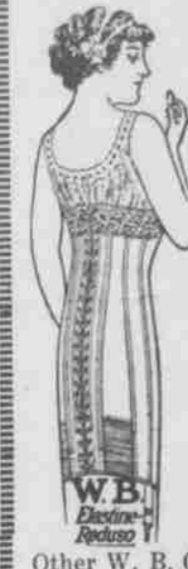

The war has played havoc with the British country gentleman.

Washington Professor Passes Away. SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 28.—Professor Frank E. Johnson, 41 years old for the last 15 years instructor in civil engineering at the University of Washington, died here a few hours after he had been operated on for appendicitis with which he was stricken four days ago. the coast, decided upon opening the canneries, although they had believed until a month ago there would not be sufficient demand for salmon to make operating profitable. The call from Europe for the cheaper grades of fish fits the Coquille canneries' output. About 50 men will be employed, and as many or more fishermen will find occupation.

Wilson's Policies Endorsed. OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 27.—Mexican and European policies of President Wilson were endorsed in resolutions adopted by the National Education Association. It was declared the war now prevailing in Europe is a tragedy. The resolutions express a fervent hope that measures adopted at a peace settlement conference would be founded on justice, and thereby break down militarism and free the world from the fear of another calamity like the present one.

NO MORE SPEECHES AT CAMP DECLARES WOOD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Citizen soldiers of the military instruction camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., will hear no more addresses except on subjects which may aid them in the training. General Leonard Wood gave Secretary of War Garrison this assurance in a telegram replying to the secretary's wire of yesterday expressing the indignation of the administration because of Colonel Roosevelt's speech criticizing the nation's foreign policy.

General Wood wired: "Telegram received. Policy laid down will be rigidly adhered to."

Asked if he had seen Colonel Roosevelt's comment on the telegram sent General Wood, Secretary Garrison said it was not his duty to save the colonel from himself.

Garrison's statement that it was not his duty to "save the colonel from himself" was made when in reply to Roosevelt's assertion that the war department knew three weeks in advance he was going to speak at Plattsburg, and as no objection was raised, stopped themselves from any right to criticize General Wood.

"Colonel Roosevelt takes the position," said Secretary Garrison, "that it is not his duty to find out if he intended to go to Plattsburg and if so head him off and save him from himself."

"He is an extremely active man. I am a very busy one and it is going to be a pretty hard job to keep an eye on him all the time."

At the war department and also at the white house, it was intimated no further developments might be expected in the incident.

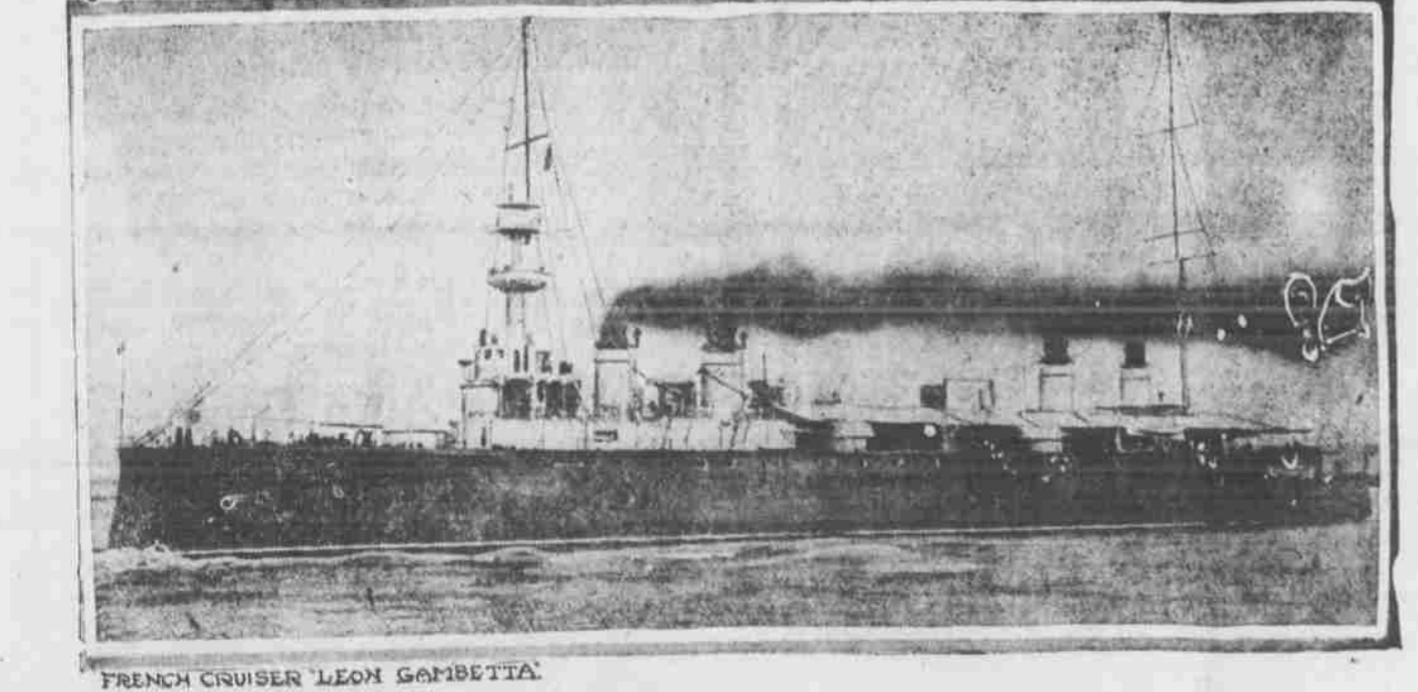

There are some people who are likely to be influenced by anything but facts.—Nashville Banner.

WATER SHORT AT BAKER BECAUSE OF DRY SPELL

BAKER, Ore., Aug. 28.—Because of the continued dry spell, Baker faces a water famine. According to Commissioner Anderson Findley, temporarily in charge of the city water, the shortage will probably be a serious one. Instead of the city reservoir being filled to the brim as usual, the water stood four feet below the overflow.

Mr. Findley at once gave orders that the street flush tank and the supply for the cemetery be shut off immediately. In addition, he announced, there will be no more washing of the streets. The thermometer reached 84 1/2 degrees Friday afternoon, the hottest of the month.

FRENCH CRUISER SUNK IN THE DARDANELLES

FRENCH CRUISER LEON GAMBETTA.

In the recent fighting at the Dardanelles the French cruiser Gambetta was sunk by the Turks. Several British and French warships of this type have fallen prey to Turkish mines and shore batteries during the operations directed against the defense in an effort to force the straits and reach Constantinople.
