POPE STILL HOPEFUL THAT PEACE IS NEAR

ROME, via Paris, Sept. 4.—Pope Benedict expressed pleasure over the fact that the diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Germany had resulted in a promise from Germany to modify her submarine warfare.

The pontiff said President Wilson, having shown both groups of belligerents the fairness, firmness and good will of the American government, could now address them with authority and probably induce them to take the preliminary steps which would gradually lead to negotiations for peace.

The pontiff was gratified to learn of the cordiality that marked the conversation between President Wilson and Cardinal Gibbons on Thursday, when the cardinal delivered to the president in Washington a message from Benedict XV.

54 U-BOATS SAID TO HAVE BEEN SUNK BY VESSELS OF ALLIES

BRITISH RECENTLY CELEBRATE WORK WITH BANQUET AT LONDON.

Sir John French Accounts for 42—Information is Sent to Friend in The American Army—Some Declared to Have Been Captured—German Submarines Greatly Reduced.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—With regard to the statement that the chief reason the Germans are preparing to abandon submarine warfare is because of their heavy losses, it is authoritatively asserted that 54 of the U-boats have been lost.

A naval banquet was held in England recently to celebrate the destruction of the 50th submarine.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Up to three weeks ago the British navy alone without regard to the navies of France and Italy, had sunk or captured 52 German submarines.

Sir John gives information. This information is contained in a personal letter from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander-in-chief of the British army in Flanders.

The letter was written to one of the best-known officers in the American army, who is an old friend of Sir John's.

This information would indicate that Germany had lost from all sources at least 55 submarines since the war began.

Three weeks ago antedated the sinking of the Arabic by a German submarine, and the list does not, therefore, include that submarine, which is reported sunk the day following, on August 20.

The French torpedo destroyers are known to have accounted for several submarines, and Italy may have been accounted for one or two.

Figures show few left. The number mentioned in Sir John French's letter is only two short of the full number of German submarines built and building July 1, 1914, as officially announced by the bureau of naval intelligence of the navy department. That was one month before war was declared.

"In the Fleets at War," a work published in England by Archibald Hurd, a naval expert, the German submarine strength last fall was fixed at 36. This would mean that nine submarines had been launched since July 1.

Of these 36 the boats numbered U-27 to U-36, the nine latest, were described by Mr. Hurd as of the highest known efficiency, each displacing about 300 tons and mounting guns as well as torpedo tubes.

APPLE AUCTIONS THE HOPE OF GROWERS IN FUTURE SAYS GEARY

NEW YORK STATE INITIATES PLAN WHICH IS EXPLAINED HERE.

Arthur M. Geary Delivers Address at Freewater Last Night Telling of the Advantages to be Obtained Through These Free Auctions—Urges Growers to Enter.

In New York City Commissioner John Dillon has just opened free auctions for the barrel apple growers of New York state and the Pacific Northwest where Arthur M. Geary as representative of the American Fruit and Produce Auction Association has been explaining the plans of the fruit auction companies of the largest eastern cities to supplant entirely the large receiving jobbers in the handling of box apples as the two battle grounds between the two great systems of marketing.

In an illustrated address before growers at Freewater, last evening, Mr. Geary declared that many eminent authorities both in the Northwest and the East considered that all the hope of the apple growers lay in a systematic use of the auctions of the thirteen largest eastern cities in place of the large jobbers' stores, as the latter had demonstrated that they could no longer handle the rapidly increasing crops of apples so as to return a profit to the grower during full crop years.

Mr. Geary spoke in part as follows: "The great cry today is for less selling charges by the establishment of more direct contact with the consumers. Growers in different parts of the Northwest have told me that apples for which they received about fifty cents they had learned had retailed for over three dollars. When you consider that most of the apples as sold by the associations either to or through a few firms of large receiving jobbers who in turn, supply retailers, who finally sell to the consumers, the fact that the growers only receive a small portion of the final price does not appear inexplicable."

"Many of the growers overlook what appears to me to be of greater importance than the subtraction of the high selling charge, namely the decreased demand for the apples of the Northwest caused by the high prices which must be paid for them. In order to market at a profit the apples of the Northwest during a full crop year, it is necessary that a wider and more direct outlet be developed than that afforded by a few jobbers' stores in each large city."

"Last year, hundreds of cars of apples were either trapped around the country or held in cold storage too long while the shippers sought f. o. b. buyers. Finally in a defective condition many of these had to be dumped upon the auction as no buyers at private sale were to be found for them, especially after they had lost quality. These cars, if they had been fed to the auctions systematically in the largest cities of the country would have brought returns written in black instead of red.

"The apple shippers are the only ones that use the great clearing houses as places of last resort for defective goods. The Californians, Floridians, Cubans, Porto Ricans, Sicilians and Spaniards place their finest fruits upon the auction markets of Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, Kansas City, Pittsburgh and like cities. Accordingly, the wholesalers, retailers and brokers come to the auctions for their regular daily supplies.

"If apples were supplied the auctions in the same manner as are the other fruits, the large selling charges of the big receiving jobber could be avoided. Also, the hundreds of little jobbers who buy in less than carload quantities could get their supplies direct."

VOCATIONS STUDIED IN VACATION TIME

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 2.—School is in the thoughts of young Puebloans here today following an unusual vacation. There were few idle hands and minds in Pueblo this summer.

Superintendent F. D. Slutz of the public schools had arranged employment for hundreds at vocations they hoped to follow in later life.

Pueblo's "vocation in the vacation" idea is being copied all over the country. Each year in the late spring blanks are sent to business men of the city asking what work they have available for a boy during the summer. The replies are filed and a search is made for the boy to fill the position. All principals and teachers cooperate in the plan. If several applicants are fit for the same position, they are told to call on the employer who is given his pick.

The result has been very encouraging. Many high school boys have received help toward a college education in this way.

To help children choose an occupation for life, a vocational guidance course has been prepared and made a part of the English work in all grades from the seventh through high school. Essays on the city's industries, successful men and business topics are regularly assigned. Prominent business men address the boys and girls at specified times.

After a vocation has been chosen by a boy or girl attention is devoted to presenting in his or her regular school work matters pertaining to it.
