Cannonding is Explained.
PARIS, Sept. 22.—An official communique, explaining the three weeks unreprieved cannonding in the western theater, declared it had resulted in the destruction of "diverse of the enemy works."

The bombardment was intended to destroy the German machine guns and shelled and impede concentration. The efficiency of the hall of shells was proven by reports of aviators. Prisoners also admit the German positions were badly damaged.

Noteworthy progress was made last night at Hartmannsweilerkopf by the use of grenades and bombs, the statement said.

JOCKEYS

Many Pendleton people last evening gathered in the library rooms to meet A. Phimister Proctor, noted sculptor, who has adopted Pendleton as his home, and his very charming wife. The reception was planned and given by all of the literary and civic organizations in the city and it was essentially a recognition by all of Pendleton of the artist who has so generously recognized Pendleton and her great frontier carnival, the Round-up.

In the receiving line, besides the Proctors, were Mayor John Dyer, Mrs. Edna H. Sturgis and C. P. Strain of the library board, Mrs. James Johns, Sr., of the Current Literature Club, Mrs. G. I. La Dow and Mrs. George A. Hartman of the Thursday Afternoon Club, Mrs. E. T. Wade of the Civic Club and J. V. Tallman of the Commercial Club.

During the evening the guests had ample opportunity to meet and talk with the distinguished sculptor and his wife and many availed themselves of the opportunity. Victrola music was played during the evening and light refreshments were served by high school maids, among them being Misses Gladys Hamley, Mildred Berkeley, Thelma Thompson, Katherine Thompson, Angela Bowler, Madeline Burgess, Beth, and Beulah Smith and Margaret Phelps.

Several of the bronzes done by Mr. Proctor, including the "Buckaroo" and "The Cowboy Head," which he began and finished in this city, were on exhibition though the main collection of bronzes did not arrive until today. "The Buckaroo," being typical of the Round-up, attracted the most attention. Other bronzes exhibited were a buffalo and a fawn.

Among the distinguished guests present last evening were Aldon Sampson, a noted man of letters who came from New York to visit during the Round-up with the Proctors, who are old friends.

Mr. Tom Boylen will have a Round-up guest during the latter part of the week, Miss Edith Still, Claud and Lloyd Still of Milton, and Mr. and Mrs. V. Gienty of Heppner.

Judge and Mrs. Stephen A. Lowell and Miss Margaret Lowell went to Walla Walla today to be present at the Lowell Snyder wedding. Mrs. James A. Fee and daughters, are also in that city for the same event, the bride, Miss Helen Snyder, being a niece of Mrs. Fee.

Last evening the Christian Endeavor society of the Christian church held its first social gathering of the season, by sailing forth on the river banks above town and holding a "Bonfire" picnic. About 50 young people gathered in a grove and played games among the trees and then held a "winer roast" which included a watermelon feast and a marshmallow toast. The grove was lighted by the bonfire and lanterns strung among the trees which made a picturesque setting to the affair. A novel time was enjoyed by all until a late hour and the party retired when the last members of the fire had burned away.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley N. Matlock will entertain Senator George E. Chamberlain while he is here attending the Round-up.

Mrs. Lot Livermore will have Miss Vera Webber of Portland as a guest during the days of the Round-up.
