810,000 Dressed in Show.
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—A dress which cost $30,000 and a hat which cost $200 will be worn in the big fashion extravaganza at Carnegie hall soon. The extravaganza will represent an entirely new idea in dramatic entertainment, evolved around the ever-fascinating subject of milady's clothing.

It is from the pen of Pierre De Loupy the noted French playwright, and is essentially modern in its theme with sufficient suggestion of the past to indicate the struggle between one period and another. There will be 50 persons in the cast several of whom have come from France especially to take part.

Baker Wheat Moving.
BAKER, Ore., Oct. 6.—Many ranchers are beginning to sell their grain because of the dullness of the market, according to local mill men, who say they are now getting a supply sufficient to keep the mills busy for some time. Some lots also are starting for the Portland market, and practically none is being sent to eastern markets.

High quality wheat is bringing 32 cents here, which, with freight added, is 22 cents in Portland. Most of the sales are being made by smaller ranchers, those with large holdings still waiting for dollar wheat or better, and correspondingly high prices in oats and barley.

The G. A. R. encampment in Washington has brought forth many "last survivors" of famous commands, but none more interesting than John Durst, the last living member of the crew of the famous Monitor. Ericson's "cheese box on a raft" which met the Confederate Merrimack and defeated her in a historic battle with which every school child in this country is familiar.

In the big parade on Wednesday Durst occupied a prominent position wearing the uniform which he wore in the famous battle more than 50 years ago. The picture shows him saluting President Wilson in the reviewing stand.

This is Vera Martin formerly of Holdman, Oregon, now of Drummond, Idaho. Does she look better with glasses or without them? A cross eye, as far as useful vision is concerned, is a blind eye. Her eyes are straight. With glasses she has normal vision in both eyes.

The principles of glass fitting that will straighten a cross eye and redevelop the lost vision will give YOU a glass for distant vision that will never require changing.

People Are Unusually Friendly to Advertised Goods These Days

ADVERTISED goods of standard quality have stood out against the raise in prices that came with the war.

They have kept faith with the public and won a measure of esteem greater than ever before.

The retailers who join in the continent-wide Newspaper Window Display Week, beginning next Monday, are putting their stores in the lime-light of public approval.

During next week retailers are asked to make window displays of the national products advertised in this and other good newspapers.

It means linking the push of the store with the pull of the newspaper, and it means gaining the good will of the public.

The advertising department of this paper will gladly furnish further information.
