A BIRDLESS CONTINENT

"NOT as much as a crow or a sparrow hovers over the ruins of Belgium," writes a correspondent of the Koelnische Zeitung.

All bird life took wing when the cannon began to belch fire and fumes; and when their nests were destroyed by shrapnel.

"The absence of bird chattering and morning and evening carols," adds the correspondent, "is distinctly felt, and constitutes a marked defect in nature's physiognomy."

Great flocks of birds were seen crossing over the Rhine in the early days of August of last year; and not a beetle or caterpillar is to be seen in Germany, which, according to the paper, swarms with hungry birds.

The Paris Temps deposes the loss to France of the Argonne nightingale, a charm of that forest and an attraction for many tourists.

"We do not know where the nightingale found shelter," says the Temps, "but we surmise that they have met the fate of all the other birds of Eastern France; asphyxiation by gases and fumes, if not the more direct slaughter by shell and bullets."

Recently a war correspondent in Poland noted the absence of all birds.

War's devastation is fatal not only to humans but also to man's feathered friends.

ONE HORSE'S MEMORY

THERE are many instances on record showing good memory on the part of dumb animals but the following seemingly authentic tale is of particular interest. It is given by M. W. Gentry.

"Many years ago," said the showman, "we had a pony named 'Marie.' She worked in the pony drill. She was a most intelligent animal, but had an ugly head. For three seasons she worked in the act, but when we got other ponies broken in we thought enough of 'Marie' to send her to the stock farm of Gentry Brothers and pension her on hay and clover.

"Five years later, almost to the day, the pony that took 'Marie's' place died on Saturday night. We had no pony to fill the place in the drill. Some one suggested 'Marie.' I caught a train and went to Louisville to meet the pony that was being brought from the farm by a groom.

"We quickly transferred her from one depot to the other, and went to Memphis to meet the show. It was due there Monday. Fifteen minutes before the pony drill I led 'Marie' on the show lots. At drill time she took her place in line, went through the drill, and did not miss a 'cue' from the trainer."

There are human beings who could not measure up to the test successfully met by a circus horse.

FINGERNAILS TELL DISPOSITION

While finger nails can not be regarded as unobtrusive guides in character or health, they do indicate the temper of the subject, says a writer in the New York Journal.

THE PURE FABRIC BILL

THERE is good authority for the statement that the pure fabric bill if enacted into law by congress will be of more benefit to wool-growers than any tariff that might be devised.

Best Woman Suffrage Editorial

Philadelphia Ledger: The suffrage campaign conducted with tireless vigor by propagandists and opponents, has been notable chiefly for the enthusiasm and the capacity for practical politics shown by both those who desire and those who do not desire the ballot.

The question is so nonpolitical it is so different from the run of administrative and economic proposals which are, from time to time, put before the voter, that the ancient method of argument is utterly inapplicable. Of a neonomic system you may say, "It won't work."

That is why America, where the individual is so cherished and treasured, welcomes the great effort made by women to put their individualities at the service of the state. That is all suffrage is. If there is a question whether woman can serve, it must be answered by each man for himself.

He will find, if he questions without prejudice, that service has been the life of all the women he has known. In the great crises of his existence, from birth, through maturity, and even in death, the service of a woman has made life possible, has glorified it and has made leaving it freedom responsible.

a passionate regret. Wherever great decisions have had to be made, when his own eyes have been clouded over with the worries of the day, he has looked to her for a serenity and judgment beyond his own and has found it. In a simpler life the communion of man and woman has been sufficient. In the turmoil and perplexities of modern existence that clear vision must function more broadly—the woman must exert her individual power through the social group.

In a hundred ways that power is being exerted. In the one way in which it could operate most freely and most beneficially it is hampered. It is not out of sentimental regard for womankind that suffrage must be granted her. It is not as a gift to her at all, but as a gift to the community that one must look upon woman suffrage. Suffrage would supplement her destined career as wife and mother. It would intensify and broaden marriage. The sublime selfishness of the mother for her children, the selfishness which makes her sacrifice everything to their welfare, needs only to be broadened in scope, that the welfare of the community may gain by it.

The words of President Wilson return to mind. He spoke of suffrage as "that privilege of responsibility," and as such he wished to see it given to women. It is not as a privilege for the service they have done. It must be given them because unless it is open their influence on the social body is irresponsible and immoral. The social fabric of this country is woven from the economic and social freedom of woman. It is time to make that

THIS MAY ENTERTAIN

NO STRANGER TO SHELLS.

A stranger became one of a group of listeners to a veteran of many battles, says Postmaster-General Charles A. Culberson of Texas. The veteran had about concluded a vividly-colored narrative of a frigid battle in which he had taken part.

"Just think of it," exclaimed one of the party turning to the stranger. "How would you like to stand with shells bursting all around you?" "I have been there," responded the newcomer.

NO LETTER FROM THE GRAVE.

Former Governor Stubbs of Kansas, is sponsor of this one: "A tramp meekly knocked on the back door of a rural home and asked a bite to eat from the housewife who responded.

"You don't look like a man who should starve," she declared, after a critical survey. "Why don't you go to work?" "I would, lady," was the reply of the hobo, "only everybody I go to wants a letter of reference from my last employer."

HOME OF THE SWALLOW.

The teacher of a primary class in natural history has a visitor in the school room one day, says Mrs. Ray Ward Brown, the New York suffragist. The teacher suddenly closed her book, turned to a boy near the foot of the class and asked:

"Willie, can you tell me where the home of the swallow is?" The youngster thought hard for a moment but could not answer.

FOOD SHORTAGE IN GERMANY GROWING SERIOUS

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg of Germany and Foreign Minister Baron Bunsen of Austria-Hungary conferred on plans for government control of food prices and distribution throughout the central empire. This dispatch is taken to indicate that recent reports of serious food shortages in Germany and Austria have strong foundation.

ARGUMENT CLOSED.

Jackson and Johnson are not now on speaking terms. It all arose as the result of an argument which required some mental calculation.

"I tell you," said Jackson, "that you are altogether wrong in your conclusions." "Pardon me, but I am not," replied Johnson.

HAD NEGLECTED THE PAPERS

Philip C. Hanna, former U. S. consul at Monterey, Mexico, touching in the course of a speech on the advantage of keeping abreast of the times, illustrated his point by reference to a traveling salesman who found himself in a village hotel dining room when a heavy downpour of rain set in.

"Gee!" he said, addressing the waitress. "It looks like the flood." "Like what?" the girl inquired.

"Like the flood. You have read of the flood, and now the ark landed on Mount Ararat, haven't you?" "No, sir," admitted the waitress. "I haven't seen a newspaper for three days."

COURTEOUS.

"Those people who live in that swell house on the hill aren't a bit stuck up," remarked the butcher.
