A CHRISTMAS ACROSTIC
 May each year the future has in store
 Emerge with brighter promise than the last;
 Replete with fairer hopes than ever before;
 Rich with the spoils of gleams from the past,
 Youth brooks but ill the curling of desire,
 Chafes at restrictions Caution would impose;
 Heave sigh on sigh and grieve at fancied woes;
 Races at Dame Fortune, and with curses dire,
 Invokes God's wrath against imagined foes.
 Still, with each year, our knowledge ampler grows,
 Till on its page is writ, with Wisdom's hand,
 Majestic symbols, which Life's aims disclose,
 Aye teaching how temptation to withstand,
 Sublimely guiding us to sweet repose.
 The above sonnet was written by a prisoner in San Quentin and sent to his little daughter in Texas as a Christmas greeting from her unfortunate father. — Ed.

PUNCTUALITY

PUNCTUALITY is said to be one of President Wilson's chief characteristics. Those who know him best declare that he is the most punctual man who has ever been in the official life of Washington; that only the intervention of fate can prevent him from being on time for an appointment. Punctuality is an asset that many discount. Too many public officials, too many business men, too many private individuals are careless in the matter of being on time. A man who is punctual is almost always efficient. Punctuality suggests system and order. It speaks of alertness and energy. It indicates a value placed upon one's own time and a consideration for the time of others. It reveals a conscientious regard for duty and honor. The boy who is tardy at school is not the scholar who heads the class. The youth who is a few minutes late at his work is not usually the one who is at hand when there is a vacancy just above him. The man who habitually taries by the wayside is generally the one who wonders when he will get acquainted with opportunity. The presence of punctuality in the endowment of the chief executive of the nation is something that should be brought to the attention of American boyhood.

KILLING AND CURING

A million more men to fight have been called for by Great Britain—more to come, if needed, remarks the Boston Post editorially. Simultaneously, the head of the army medical corps gives notice that 2500 more doctors must get ready to enlist for service at the front. Thus does the curative art keep step with the development of the process of killing and mutilation. And it is successful. Official figures are given indicating that 85 per cent of the reported German wounded in battle are sent back patched up in condition to resume work with their regiments in some capacity. The medical service of the allies undoubtedly equals this record of efficiency. It is in the preservation of sanitary conditions that this aid finds its greatest value. The life of civilization in the 20th century may perhaps be recognized in history as due to the skill of our doctors.

Judging from the way cellars are being stocked these days there are not a few residents of the city who believe in the doctrine of preparedness.

The Oregon Journal recently made the statement that taxpayers do not object to a road tax when they get a dollar's worth of road for a dollar. This leads Col. Wood of the Western Leader to remark that when a taxpayer gets a dollar's worth of anything for a dollar the millenium will have arrived.

The press dispatches failed to keep us informed of all of the president's movements yesterday. Those correspondents on the ground should be severely reprimanded.

Only three more days until the great drought arrives.

THIS MAY ENTERTAIN

SPEAKING SOFTLY.
 A Missouri farmer was driving a refractory cow down the road and driver came to a crossroad. The man wanted the cow to go straight ahead, but the cow picked out the crossroad. A colored man was coming along the crossroad.
 "Hald her off! Hald her off!" called the driver.
 The colored man jumped about the road and waved his arms. The cow proceeded calmly on her way.
 "Hald her off! Hald her off!" called the driver.
 "I'm trying ter!" replied the colored man.
 "Speak to her! Speak to her and she'll stop."
 "Good mawrin', cow—good mawrin'!" said the other, politely.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.
 Don't Ever Let Anyone Tell You This As a New One.
 "What becoms of that young fellow who got a job as helper to an aviator?"
 "He lost the job."
 "Proved incompetent, eh?"
 "Nope. He and his boss fell out over something."
 A check book never makes interesting reading unless there is a bank account behind it.

NEW COMPOSITE SPORT COSTUME

Here we have a unique though very practical costume which can be used equally as well for all outdoor sports, skating, skiing, mountain climbing, and horseback riding. This costume, which is entirely new and unlike the usual sporting models, is being worn by Miss Marguerite Namara, a prima donna in "Alone at Last." It is made up of a turkered kid leather, with just a touch of bisque colored broadcloth collar and cuffs to soften it. The coat is strictly military style, the light waist line belted in with a leather belt as a fastening on the side and reaches to the knees. In opening the coat, one can see the little bloomer effect trousers, which are tight around the limbs, and the laced boots come up to reach the bottom of the trousers. It has three pockets, one above the waist line, and one on each hip, below the belt. The costume is more serviceable than anything of its kind made in broadcloth. It is not as perishable as softer materials. Despite the fact that it has trousers it cannot be immodest for they were introduced only to give the wearer freedom of movement.

Are We in Peril of Over Education?

(By Chas. F. Thwing, LL. D., President Western Reserve University.)
 Education is, in fact or in result, the power of thinking. Are men in danger of thinking with too much comprehensiveness or too close accuracy or too deep seriousness?
 Education is, in fact or result, an acquaintance with the best that man has achieved or suffered in or rejected over.
 Are men in danger of a knowledge too extended or too thorough of all human conditions and elements?
 Man is in peril of either license or of over-education in liberty.
 Education is enlarged sympathy with all sorts and conditions of men. It stands for human catholicity. Are men in peril of being too broad in their feelings toward all men? Are they in danger of being too democratic?
 Education stands for fitting a boy or girl for a sphere; the greater the future sphere the better the education should be. Is there peril that one will be fitted for a sphere with an aptness too exact or an efficiency too great?
 Education consists in the discipline of enthusiasms, in the regulation of passion, in the guidance of emotions. Is there peril that this regulation will be too restrictive?
 Education results in the enlargement and enrichment of character, in the transmutation of idols into worthy ideals.
 Is there peril that character will become too noble?
 Education is a training in wisdom. Its symbol is the owl; is it because the owl sees under conditions in which it is hard to see? Is there peril that men will become overwise?
 Education stands for the cardinal virtues of bravery, temperance, justice.
 Is there peril that men will become too brave or too temperate or too just?
 Education stands for the graces of patience and love and appreciation.
 Is there a peril that man will love his brother too deeply or be too patient with his brother's faults or too appreciative of his brother's excellence?
 Education stands for the gentleman. Is there peril that humanity will have too many men whose intellect is conscientious and whose conduct is too thoroughly permeated with a sense of duty, or whose manners are too considerate of others?
 Education stands for service for men. Is there peril that man will do too much for his fellows?
 When the question, Are we in peril of being over-educated? is asked, it is a false conception of education which lies in the questioner's mind. It is a conception of education as a

It does not always reform a man to get married, but it usually makes him more cautious. Slavish solicitude on the part of the wife seldom wins the affection of a selfish man. The man who does not love his mother will never love a wife. The fact that a few of us are still living seems to make the snap out of a lot of these deadly-nerve theories. We are often saddened by thought that the handsome movie screen heroes have a wise value. It is better to tell the truth in the first place than to admit things when backed up in a corner. The business man who begins the day with a smile may be excused if he lets it relax when a bore approaches. The man who makes his home the garbage dump of ill-nature is the joy of the divorce lawyer. If the classic dancers wore more clothes they would not be so popular. During the fighting on the Kashmir frontier, when the British troops defeated the rebellious Hunzas, the natives used bullets of pure garnets enclosed in lead. Many of the troops preserved these as curiosities.
