WHAT PART WILL SINCLAIR PLAY IN ORGANIZED BASEBALL.

HARRY SINCLAIR

Harry Sinclair, the Oklahoma oil magnate and owner of the Newark Federals at present is the biggest question mark in baseball. All sorts of speculations are being made as to the part Sinclair will play after the baseball peace has been consummated and the Federals are absorbed by the two other leagues. Sinclair was said to be backing the proposed New York Federals and rumor credits him with being a prospective purchaser of the New York Giants.

A recent statement from Sinclair credits him with saying that he held the contracts of Benny Kauff, Lee Magee, and George Anderson, Federal stars all with the Brooklyn team, and that negotiations for these players would have to be conducted with him.

"When Shall We Three Meet Again?"
Mayor Best, prohibition and 1916 came riding into the city on the same horse.

To Tend to His Own Business.
In order that the people of Pendleton may not have to waste time idly speculating on the question of "What to do with our ex-mayors," Private Citizen John Dyer announced today that hereafter he will give his undivided attention to his grocery business.

We sympathize With the Allies.
Prof. E. K. Gels gave us one of his Christmas cigars and, after smoking it, we believe we are in a position to sympathize with the troops in the allies' trenches when the Germans begin sending clouds of asphyxiating gas over them.

Make It Hygiene With Babies.
"I hear that you have some babies in the city," said the stranger with a short "X" habit.
"No-o, I think not," said the home citizen who was accustomed to correct pronunciation of the disease. "I don't believe there is even a synagogue here."

Better Turn on the Fountains.
Now that the saloons are closed, some of our citizens are going to discover that Pendleton has a fine water supply. Heretofore, they have condemned the Thorn Hollow water just because it was water.

Saved by a Syllable.
We wish to announce that Mayor Dyer's pronouncement requiring the muzzling of all dogs does not affect the Bulldogger. The last syllable of our name permits us still to remain within the ranks of the unmuzzled press.

Pendleton's Nine Wonders.
To the Bulldogger:

The old world had her nine wonders and I have noticed that almost every modern city has about nine distinctive matters of more than passing interest. Being a newcomer, I would appreciate it if you would point out nine things for which Pendleton is known, things that you would be glad to tell friends about.

Truly yours,
NEWCOMER.
You give us a hard task, madam, or perhaps it is sir. However, we are willing to try anything once. If we omit anything we ask for pardon in advance. If anyone has a better list, be not unduly modest. The world is entitled to know for what Pendleton is famous.

We would mention first the Round-up and do not feel obliged to state reasons. Then there is the Round-up's little brother, Happy Canyon. Any list would be incomplete without containing the Moorhouse collection of Indian curios and pictures or the Pendleton Indian robe. That makes four. Then, there is the Eastern Oregon State Hospital and the Emerald reservation with all its attractions. Perhaps, too, we should mention the fact that one per cent of the wheat raised in the U. S. is grown in the county of which Pendleton is the county seat. That makes seven of the nine. Eighth we might mention some individual citizen such as R. Alexander, Judge Fee or Doc Best, but perhaps the Wensha Club has a wonder. At least it is talked about enough. And to complete the list, dear sir or madam, we would ask you to mention Pendleton herself.

EDITHOIL.

A Practical Set of Vows.

Sincerely believing that the institution of making New Year's resolutions and breaking them within a week is detrimental to the best interests of the moral makeup of mankind and yet recognizing the universal desire to swear off something, the Weekly Bulldogger has compiled a set of rather belated New Year's resolutions which few should feel the necessity of breaking. We print them herewith.

Resolved, That we will not patronize the saloons during 1916.

Resolved, That we will do no more Christmas shopping until next December.

Resolved, That we will maintain our neutrality by refusing to join either the German army or the army of the allies.

Resolved, That we will not buy from mail order houses unless we think we are getting a good bargain.

Resolved, That we will not, consciously snore in our sleep.

Resolved, That we will smoke nothing but tobacco during the year.

Resolved, That we will not become a candidate for office unless we feel that the people want us.

Resolved, That we will not gossip about anybody in their presence.

Resolved, That we will try to keep ourselves free from the criticism of being malefactors of great wealth.

Resolved, That we will practice economy so long as it does not interfere with our good times.

Resolved, That we will break all resolutions that entail any sacrifice on our part.

An Anatomical Distinction.

First Citizen—"Who are all of those young fellows getting off the train?"

Second Citizen—"Oh, that's the University of Oregon Glee Club."

First—"What's a glee club? A bunch of footballers?"

Second—"Oh, no, a bunch of mouth bawlers."

Threw Up His Job.

Pa McDevitt, well known young bartender, told his boss to take his job and sit on it last Friday evening about 11 o'clock and left the saloon. We understand that there was a general walk-out of bartenders on the same evening.

A Merry Christmas Indeed.

The prisoners of the county jail had a merry Christmas indeed and they are very grateful to a church society for refreshments as well as entertainment. The society, as a matter of fact, meant to furnish only refreshments but in the individual packages they handed the prisoners they had unconsciously included the key to some real fun, too. Among the candies were some little cubical pieces that were easily converted into the sweetest little set of dice, and with these the prisoners shot craps all day with the balance of the candy for stakes. At the end of the day two of the men had all the candy.

Now, Girls, You Have 366 Days For It

The year 1916 is a leap year and that explains why Funk, Judge Marsh, Harry Gray, Clarence Bishop, Fred Lampkin, Roy Ritter and a few others are wearing such cherubic smiles. Hope springs eternal in the bachelor breast.

CHILD LABORERS MUST GET AN EDUCATION

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Jan. 2.—Beaver Falls today opens a new kind of public school, with an enrollment of nearly 100 young pupils. It is the "continuation school," started under the new Pennsylvania child labor law which makes it compulsory for employed minors to receive at least eight hours' educational instruction weekly. The scholars here are from 14 to 16. Some of them will attend two hours a day, while others will make up their eight hours by two four-hour shifts. School days are Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Stories From the War Zone

(BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS.)
United Press Staff Correspondent.
PARIS, Dec. 31.—(By Mail)—The women bakers of France have just threatened the government with a strike that would be unique in the world's history. Neither shorter hours nor increased pay is demanded. All they want is their husbands, and they insist that unless those husbands are recalled from the colors and restored to their bake ovens, they will unfurl and starve the government into acquiescence.

Flour of the highest quality, they admit, is provided by the government, but a waste of this and a defective bread, they say, comes from the employment as army bakers of non-professionals. They insist that the government supplant the latter with professional bakers first by calling out to the line and secondly by calling to the colors bakers who for one reason or another have escaped military service, of whom there are sufficient, they say, to provide the army with all the professional bakers necessary, while their own husbands serving at the front could come home and resume the work of supplying the civil population. The petition concludes: "For a long time we have concealed our anguish from our husbands in order not to cause them either worry or discouragement at the front. They are loyal French men, determined to sacrifice everything for the deliverance of the fatherland. And we are loyal French women determined to make the same sacrifice."

The ultimatum of the woman bakers of France has just been delivered to the government by a committee headed by Madame Preleux of Arcueil-Cachan, president of the Ligue Boulangere, or women bakers' union. She supplemented the complaint with 1,500 letters from women bakers who declare they can no longer face their present trials without the aid of their husbands.

"Our husbands are mobilized and we consider ourselves equally mobilized, like soldiers, to the fire of our ovens. For fifteen months we have given evidence of this by an exhausting labor, a patience, a devotedness and a disinterestedness without limit."

Home made bread is unknown in France. The business of baking is extensive and all-essential. Nine out of ten small businesses are jointly conducted by husband and wife, and the occupation of baker is one that lends itself peculiarly to this arrangement.

With the call to the colors of all the men bakers, the wives and daughters took up the industries unaffected by the war. If anything it increased, as much of the population has been reduced to the consumption of bread as the principal article of diet.

The women were obliged to bake the bread and deliver it to an entire community. After fifteen months of such trials they declare they can endure it no longer.

"We will close instead our shops one by one. If relief or some sort does not come to us we will be compelled to close all our shops either through lack of help, through our excessive fatigue or through lack of resources."

The decision of the women was made after they had outlined a plan showing how it could be done in accordance with patriotism and forethought for the army. Their resolutions declared that the army above all must have the bread possible.

"We will close instead our shops one by one. If relief or some sort does not come to us we will be compelled to close all our shops either through lack of help, through our excessive fatigue or through lack of resources."

PENSIONS FOR BLIND BEGIN IN ILLINOIS

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 3.—Pensions for the blind became effective in Illinois today. Each blind man above the age of 21 and each blind woman above the age of 18 will be paid $150 a year in quarterly installments, by the counties in which they live. Provision is made for competent medical examination and for regulation to prevent fraud. The act providing the pensions was passed by the last general assembly. It was introduced by Representative Tom Gorman of Peoria. The number of beneficiaries has been variously estimated at from 20,000 to 40,000.
