ITALIAN TROOPS IN TRENCHES ENJOY ALL COMFORTS OF HOME

MEN ARE WARMED BY STEAM HEAT WHICH TO MANY IS A GREAT LUXURY.

In Fact, Those Who Are Left Behind Are Not All So Comfortable, According to Youths Returning from the Front—Terrors of Winter Are Driven Away.

BY ALICE ROHE.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.) ROME, Dec. 24.—(By Mail.)—Italy's boys in the trenches had a royal Christmas. Best of all their Christmas gifts was Christmas dinner in steam heated trenches. With their modern trench improvements they had the best of it over some of the girls they left behind them. For sunny Italy has the coldest interiors and the poorest heating facilities in the world. In the trenches however, up where the snow is heavy and the rains are freezing in the mountains, the steam heated trenches are driving away the terrors of a winter campaign.

The sending of gifts to soldiers at the front was one of the most touching of all Christmas activities. Everyone wanted to send something. A poorly clad woman entered one of the stations where special boxes of sweets, ready for sending to soldiers, were on sale. She had only sixteen soldi. The boxes were one franc fifty.

"I'll buy something," she said. "I've no one at the front now. My boy's fallen at Col di Lana but I want to send some little comfort to some other mother's boy." She bought a small package of sweets for sixteen cents and some mother's boy must have felt a different quality in that heavily purchased remembrance.

The order that chocolate and sweets could not be sent privately to soldiers at the front caused such a wall that parliament decided to change the order. The order had been given because of the fear that poisoned sweets from suspicious and concealed quarters might reach the soldiers. Enough evidence had come to the ears of the authorities to warrant this action. It was this same fear that resulted in the public cigar and cigarette collection stations being abandoned. The opportunities for enemies sending poisoned cigars or cigarettes offered too strong a temptation to evil minds.

The discovery of poisoned tobacco brought the decisive order. Thousands of cigars were destroyed and the order was that henceforth only money would be accepted to buy cigars from government supply stores.

At Christmas time the bars were down for chocolate and sweets. In the face of Christmas sentiment voices of mothers and sweethearts were heard and children, love and precaution wrapped aside. And the rush of burlesque and candy, of chocolate, of tobacco and all sorts of presents, has appalled the postal clerks.

Ambassador Gerard Kills Two Deer.

BY CARL ACKERMAN.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, Dec. 19.—(By Mail.)—

out hunting with the American military attaché in Berlin, Colonel Kuhns, Ambassador Gerard killed two small deer with one shot. The colonel on the other hand, fired two shots without hitting a deer.

Old Gerard's friends do not know that he was an expert crack-nerve marksman rifleman, they would think this an accident, but this is the second time this winter that Gerard killed two deer with one shot. For it happened thus:

Gerard and the colonel went out to the ambassador's game preserve near Berlin. Two small deer appeared. Gerard fired at one. The bullet went through its heart, struck a rib, glanced off the side and went through the second deer! More game appeared and the officer took a shot and another shot, but the deer disappeared on their way home Gerard decided he would like to bag a duck for dinner because Mrs. Gerard's mother is visiting here and likes duck. It was dark. The Ambassador slipped one. Gerard and Gerard's dog went to get it home. It was too old to eat.

"That's what I get for shooting ducks at night," remarked Gerard smilingly when he reached the embassy.

RAN AWAY BECAUSE OF LOVE OF OUTDOORS

EMMA BOLLONGINO.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Surrounded by loads of pretty flowers, 14 year old Emma Bollongino, is back in the home of her wealthy parents after having run away to the country and accepted a position as a mental in a farm house. Miss Bollongino ran away because she loved the big outdoors, flowers and fields, and did not want to live in the city with its brick walls and iron grinders. She spent her vacation in the country last summer and the thoughts of the green fields and open spaces remained fresh in her memory. A few weeks ago she mysteriously disappeared. A wife search revealed her working in the kitchen of a farm house. She was brought back home, but consented not to run away again, only on the promise that she should have all the flowers she wanted and should be allowed to visit the country once a month.

Stories From the War Zone

BY WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

MONASTIR, Serbia, Dec. 1.—(By Mail.)—This is to introduce General

Dusan Vassich. He isn't a general at this writing; only a Serbian colonel; but between now and the time you read this he'll be promoted. By that time Monastir probably will have fallen and the last big city of the Serbians will be in the hands of the Austro-German-Bulgars. But for ten days Colonel Vassich has held the city against odds and he'll hold it as long as he can. He is only forty-five, but he is tired looking and thin; his hands are wrinkled like an old man's. When he came out of headquarters and climbed in to the automobile where I had been placed to await him, he was sufficed up to guard against rheumatism. Three hundred battles he has been in in his time, and battles against Bulgars and Turks leave their marks. All this Monastir country he knows as he knows the palm of his hand. He has fought over it time and again and as we whirled out of town toward the Bulgarian front he shaves often at the mountains, some of them snow clad, as if looking to see if they have changed during the three days he has been in bed. It's the road to Perahia. It runs between high hills and then crosses a swamp. When we come to the swamp we stop. This swamp made Col. Vassich a hero throughout European army circles during the war with the Turks three years ago. "When army men who think they know just how much soldiers can stand and who measure the strength of men en masse as engineers test steel beams, had never been certain as to whether men could fight any length of time while standing in water, Colonel Vassich found out for them and what he discovered they put down in their wise military books.

"Here is where we stood," said Col. Vassich. "For three days my men stood with me in this swamp and fought the Turks on those hills." I asked him how deep the water was.

"Up to our waists, sometimes up to our chins, sometimes over our heads, and when a man was wounded he was drowned." I asked him whether it was cold.

"That was three years ago and I haven't been well since. It was indeed cold. Neither have hundreds of my soldiers been well since. But we held the Turks off Monastir."

"How did the men carry their ammunition?"

"On their heads, but many of them carried it around their belts and found that the water didn't hurt it any. But come, we must get up to the trenches."

Two soldiers gave the car a start. It had once been a fine limousine, but the years of Serbian fighting had left their marks on it as well as on the colonel. Every time we started it was with the assistance of soldiers who put their shoulders to the once brilliantly black limousine body and gave hearty pushes to help the gasoline. Behind us was Monastir, which once belonged to Bulgaria, and now belonged to Serbia, before us were the Bulgars coming again with their deadly cry of "Terra Nostra est nosh" which means "Forward with the bayonet!" The women and children huddled back there in Monastir knew that cry. The sick, tired men in the car beside you is holding back the ones who voice it, but if the Monastirians cease to hear the booming of the Serbian guns tonight, they had better dress and hurry along the wintry roads toward the Greek border.

WATCH SORE THROATS

because swollen glands or inflamed membranes often affect other tissues and lung trouble easily follows.

As Nature's corrector of throat troubles the pure cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is speedily converted into germ-resisting tissue; its tested glycerine is curative and healing, while this wholesome emulsion relieves the trouble and upbuilds the forces to resist tubercular germs and avert the weakening influence which usually follows. If any member of your family has a tender throat, get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion-to-day. Physicians prescribe it to avert throat troubles, overcome bronchial disorders and strengthen the lungs. BERLIN, Jan. 12.—The American embassy is negotiating with the foreign office to secure, if possible, a modification of the recently promulgated regulation for issuing passports for entrance into Germany. Several days ago the American embassy in Vienna announced that on account of the new German passport regulations three Americans had found it impossible to go from Austria to Germany.

Maternity! The Word of Words

It is written into life's expectations that motherhood is the one sublime accomplishment. And if there is anything, no matter how simple, how apparently trivial it may seem, if it can all help, assist or in any way comfort the expectant mother, it is a blessing. And such is a remedy called "Mother's Friend."

You apply it over the stomach muscles. It is gently rubbed on the surface, and makes the muscles pliant. This relieves the strain on ligaments, natural expansion takes place without undue effort upon the nerves. And as the time approaches the mind has gone through a period of repose, of gentle expectancy, and this has an unquestioned influence upon the future child. That this is true is evidenced by the fact that three generations of mothers have used and recommended "Mother's Friend." Ask your nearest druggist for a bottle of this splendid remedy. He will get it for you. And then write to Bradford Regulator Co., 407 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a most interesting book of information to prospective mothers. It is mailed free. Write today. It is a book you will enjoy.
