LITTLE BOYS, CIRCUS CRAZY, MISSING FOR NEARLY 12 MONTHS

EVER SINCE JUNE OF LAST YEAR YOUTHS HAVE BEEN LOST TO PARENTS.

Despite Efforts to Get Trace of Them, Boys Have Not Been Found—Father Alone Mourns for Children—Offers All His Resources as Reward for Missing Lads.

(By United Press)

PENDLETON, Ind., Feb. 14.—Somewhere in the United States two lost little boys are wandering around looking for the circus they dreamed and read and played about so much on the home place of John Wolverton near here. Ever since early in June of last year the boys, Albert 13, and Russell, 12, have been gone. Their father and older brother Archie have spent a great deal of time and money running down vague rumors of lost little boys in cities all over the middle West. It is almost a year since they ran away and the little boys have not been found.

John Wolverton is not a rich man. He has a pretty good farm and works hard to keep it up in the right kind of crops. His wife died several years ago and after that Wolverton's interest all centered in his boys and his home. Wolverton doesn't talk much about Albert and Russell, but he watches eagerly for newspaper reports of lost boys and he keeps much to himself. He has aged in the last year and his neighbors look upon Wolverton as a heartbroken man.

A neighbor lad who had traveled as a Razzle Dazzle or minstrel with a circus is said to have fired the last imaginations with his wonderful stories of life with a circus. It was not long after this boy's return that Albert and Russell slipped out of the farm house one night and ran away. Both the boys are fair, with brown hair and blue eyes and a trifle under-sized for their ages. Wolverton offers a reward of $25 all his resources will allow for information that will lead to the finding of the boys. His address is Archie Wolverton, 526 West Wiley avenue, Bluffton, Indiana.

MOTHER ALARMED OVER RICH WIDOW WHO MARRIED A BRITON.

MRS. M. TERWILLIGER

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Mrs. G. M. Terwilliger, of Brooklyn, is anxious about the safety of her daughter, Mrs. Hyton George Morton North, whose husband is the second son of the late Hon. William North, a brother of the sixth Earl of Guilford. Mrs. North is remembered by the attorneys as Gertrude Reynolds, a Water and Fields girl who married James P. McQuade, a steel millionaire who died in England. She married North soon after McQuade's death.

Mrs. Terwilliger depends upon her daughter for support and since December 1 she had not heard from her. At that time she was living on her English estate. "I am in want of the actual necessities of life, I am starving," the mother said.

In the last letter from her daughter she said she was going to Italy and would write again when she reached Rome. Mrs. Terwilliger does not know whether North accompanied her daughter to Italy. "There was nothing in the letter to indicate she had trouble of any sort," she added.

GEN. SARRAIL DRIVES SPIES OUT OF LAND OCCUPIED BY ALLIES

SALONICA IS AT LAST SPY PROOF WITH THE GOING OF ENEMY DIPLOMATS.

French Authorities Take Prompt Action Following Air Raids on City—Despite Protests, Orders Are Strictly Carried Out and No Diplomat Allowed to Remain.

BY WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD

SALONICA, Greece, Dec. 20.—(By Mail)—At last Salonica is spy proof. To make it so has been a tough and a long job. General Sarrail settled it all today in one grand clean-up that was full of exciting incidents.

Ever since the allies came to Salonica spies have been here. The German, Austro-Hungarian, Bulgarian and Ottoman consulates have been open, as usual, the Salonica residents, represented by these consulates, have gone about their business, and to see German officers, clad in civilian clothes, dining at a table next to British or French officers has been no uncommon sight.

Many German and Austrian strangers also resided in the hotels. The allies had no control over their coming or going. This situation was not so dangerous to the ally forces so long as they were fighting in Serbia, but when the troops fell back into Greece and Salonica became headquarters for the field forces it was necessary at once to remove from Salonica all enemy citizens and consular representatives.

Salonica, as a military precaution, had to be made an ally city. How to do it was the question. The consuls would not go; their governments would not recall them; and so long as they remained their nationals would not depart.

The beginning of the end came this morning when a flock of three German aeroplanes soared over Salonica and dropped forty bombs on the surrounding camps. At noon the next day was repeated. The warships in the harbor fired shrapnel but missed the fliers. A lonely Bulgarian shepherd, three miles out of town on a hillside with his flock of sheep, was hit by a German shell and he and five of his sheep were killed.

While the second lot of German aeroplanes was in the air Gen. Sarrail decided to get all enemy citizens out of the town as quickly as possible. It required eight automobiles. Two cars each went to the German, Austrian, Bulgarian and Turkish consulates and detachments of soldiers were placed at all entrances. A French officer who entered the German consulate was met by Consul General Walters with the remark: "You have no right to invade German premises on Greek soil."

"The Germans invaded Greek soil with their aeroplanes this morning," the Frenchman said. "The consuls and Walters was taken to French headquarters with all his staff. At the Bulgarian consulate the consul general was not in. When he arrived half an hour later, he was stopped by a sentry.

"But I am the Bulgarian consul general," he said, "and this is my consulate."

"Ah! In that case I will take in your car," within a few moments the Bulgarian consul general received word from a sentry that he would be entering within his own consulate. He found a French officer sitting at his desk.

"What does this mean, sir?" "I am the Bulgarian consul general," replied the official.

"That is very unfortunate," said the officer, "for I am under orders to place the Bulgarian consul general under arrest." The Hungarian's protest was formal. He rode to the French headquarters in an automobile.

Thessalonian crowds followed the operations of the military men with the greatest interest. There was something of a rush of the crowd toward the Austrian consulate, for word had gone abroad among the Salonica folk that the Austrians might put up a fight. A few French soldiers with rifles were about the place but the crowd saw an officer go into the consulate and shortly returned with the consul general of Austria-Hungary, who climbed into an automobile and sped to French headquarters.

Word got around after this that the consul general of Turkey had a harem and that the French and British were going to raid it. This rumor perhaps accounted for the fact that the largest crowd of all stood about the Turkish consulate. It developed that there was no harem there, the Ottoman consul general being a bachelor who was reared in Paris. He came down the steps with a French soldier, chatting gaily in French and took his auto ride to General Sarrail's headquarters.

All the dependants and assistants of the four consulates numbered fifty-two men and six women. They were all put on a boat, bound, it is presumed at this writing, for Athens.

General Carrail then sent an automobile to the American consulate and begged that John H. Kehl, the American consul—all the other government representatives in Salonica were consul generals and Kehl is the most poorly paid of them all—center with him as to taking over the enemy consulates. Within a few hours Kehl was on the job and in possession of most of the archives and all the money of the military had seized in the consulates. He immediately began the task of giving passports to German, Bulgarian, Turkish and Austrian citizens to depart from Salonica.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

As a means of arousing great enthusiasm for the last basketball game of the season on February 25, with the Grande high school, the Pendleton boys have now arranged for one of the most novel features in support of the high school activities ever set undertaken. To gain the support of the town people the boys are going to put out large posters on which any merchant may be represented if he so desires. These posters the boys will distribute over the residential district of the town as advertisements for the different business houses of the city.

On Friday they will put on a parade in which all the merchants of the city will have a representative. The parade will start at 5:20 at the foot of Main street hill. From here it will go down Main to Court, up Court to Johnson, down Johnson to Alta down Alta to Main and then back to the high school. The parade is something new and all the people of Pendleton should avail themselves of the opportunity to witness it.
