template ridding his country of its chief murderer and trouble-maker. The capture and execution of Villa should be a great step toward the more firm establishment of a stable, constitutional government in Mexico.

Yet no one can foretell what is in store for us down there. It is a complicated problem.

CONDITIONS ESSENTIAL TO DISARMAMENT

WHAT sort of an international union is necessary to bring about permanent peace in the world and do away with armaments by individual nations? The answer would be the key to the whole peace movement yet many well meaning peace advocates give the subject little heed. They are so intent on gaining the end—permanent peace and disarmament—that they skip hastily over the question of the essentials to that end.

One theory held by many people is that disarmament for individual nations will never be safe until a world wide power is set up sufficiently strong to enforce a decree against individual armament. In the feudal days each baron maintained his own force of warriors and he had to do so because his central government was not strong enough to guarantee him protection. As the national governments grew stronger the situation changed. The military functions were assumed by the state and the lords and princes did away with their armed forces. It was logical for them to do so, yet had they disarmed too soon they would have become the prey of their more militaristic neighbors.

Is not the situation confronting the nations of the world today somewhat similar to the conditions faced at one time by the feudal lords and their followers? Can the nations afford to disarm until a central world authority capable of maintaining peace has been established? If so then the peace advocates should withhold their disarmament talk for the time and devote their energies to bringing about an international arrangement that will make world wide disarmament practicable.

AS NEVER BEFORE

NAVIGATION of the Columbia between Portland and Lewiston was inaugurated by the departure of the Twin Cities Wednesday, and the J. N. Teal is to go on the run next Tuesday. The schedule is to be two boats per week.

As never before, the operation of these boats has a meaning. That meaning was made most impressive by the decision of the Interstate Commission in which there is implied announcement that Portland is to be denied the benefit of her location and that the Columbia cities in general are not to have the advantages of a water level haul in rate making.

This meaning is, that, as never before, the Columbia river stands out as the sure means by which Portland and the interior cities can compel rates to which geography and natural laws entitle them. The way to get those rates is to navigate the river.

Every ton of freight routed via the river is a blow struck for commercial freedom for the Columbia from its mouth to its source.

Every sack of wool shipped from Lewiston or every bushel of wheat shipped from Walla Walla via boat is a declaration of commercial independence.

Every loaded boat that passes up or down the river is one step nearer removal of costly over mountain rates on a water level route.

Every cargo discharged from any steambot at any point along the Columbia is one more unanswerable argument for water level freight rates for water level cities.

It is self defense for every city along the way to use these boats. There should be such an outpouring of traffic that soon not two, but two dozen boats may be required to handle it.—Portland Journal.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The twelfth annual roll call of the First Baptist church was celebrated last evening at a banquet in the church parlors. Rev. E. H. Cleveland offered thanks, after which a bounteous feast was enjoyed by 200 members and friends. R. H. Wilcox presided as toast master. The roll was called by Mrs. Earl Gregg, the clerk to which 34 members responded. A letter from James M. Pruitt was read, telling of the founding and early history of the church.

The toast of the evening was "The Church as I First Saw It," and was responded to by Mrs. Lulu Wilcox, L. E. Penland, A. F. May, J. H. Morris, Mrs. Mary C. Harvey, and Earl Gregg, each telling in an interesting manner the history and conditions of the church as they first found it.

Musical numbers during the evening were a piano solo by Prof. Erik Rucke, selection by the ladies' quartette, composed of Mrs. Marvey, Mrs. Mason, Mrs. McConnell and Miss Cleveland; vocal solo by Mrs. Bakar; violin solo by Mrs. Garnet Baldwin; and a vocal duet by Miss Cleveland and Will Penland.

Rev. E. H. Cleveland spoke of "The Church as I now see it." After speaking freely of the past, he expressed his joy in seeing the church a happy one progressive in every way and for the future he sees it continue to grow in social and spiritual lines.

Mrs. A. F. May, financial secretary, spoke on the church finances. Mr. Bartlett, of Portland, was called upon and spoke in a pleasing manner. The program closed by all standing and singing "Hail to the Lord that binds," followed by the benediction by the pastor.

Mrs. George W. McMath, who will arrive tomorrow from Portland in order to attend the "Better Babies" baby meeting here Sunday, will be the guest of Mrs. Wilson D. McNary while here. Mrs. McNary will have some of the Pendleton ladies call on her tomorrow afternoon to meet her. Monday noon she will be honored by the pupils of the high school domestic science department with a complimentary dinner.

WANTS SLEEPING MEDICINE.
(By Dr. E. B. Hoadop, Pendleton, Or.)
"Can you give me medicine to make me sleep?" said a patient, coming in to the office.

"Yes, I could give you a dose of morphine, which is the best sleep producer known. I could give you a bromide as well, but I don't do business that way. If you confide in me and let me know a little of your history, perhaps we will find worry, diet, exercise or a dozen other things that are influencing your sleep. Then after we understand one another the relaxing treatment of the muscles and quieting of the nerves will do the rest. You will not need anything else, I assure you. Try it.—Adv.

Deer Reported to be Thick in South End of the County

DEPUTY WARDEN TOSKIN SAYS 1000 WITHIN RADIUS OF 15 MILES.

Driven down by the meadows and brakes by the deep snow in the mountains, the deer have become so thick in the far south end of the county that they almost run over the settlers there, according to word brought back yesterday by Deputy Warden George Tonkin who made a trip into Grant county. He states that Fred Groom, ranger at the Dale station, estimates that there are now 1000 deer on Desolation and North Fork within a radius of 15 miles above the junction of the two.

Mr. Tonkin saw for himself evidence of an unusual number of deer and thinks they are just as numerous this side of the range station as on the other side. They are so thick that they are a strong temptation to the settlers of those parts and, for this
