How Is This?

In a letter to Robbins & West Auto Co., dated April 28th, Grover Conger of Long Creek, says: "I arrived safe and sound at six o'clock last evening, after putting the little Grant through the most severe trip that could be possible for any car to put through. We pulled through mud and doxy axle deep and the Flowers gulch hill was as slick as grease with the rain pouring down in torrents. Two cars are stuck here now with roads far better ahead of them than I came over yesterday."

Upon his arrival at Pilot Rock Mr. Conger phoned the above firm that a foot of snow had fallen in the mountains and he was afraid to go ahead. He was told that a foot of snow did not bother a Grant and to go on. His letter tells the tale.—Adv.

UNIVERSITY LOOKED UPON AS EXPERT ON FLAT FEET

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, April 29.—Since the Associated Press and United Press sent out from Portland the story of feet defects revealed through a system of special photographs taken in the women's physical training department at the university, appeals for help have been coming to the department from women over all the United States.

To them the department extends the same free aid that is given the afflicted girls of the university; a diagnosis and list of corrective work with directions is sent out. Through these exercises, which take some effort but not much time, and which involve no apparatus or other expense, flattened arches or pronated feet can usually be restored to nearly normal condition.

In one of the exercises the patient is directed to put 25 marbles on the floor, pick them up one by one with the toes and put them into a dish. This simple proceeding strengthens the transverse arch. The transverse arch of many girls has been broken down through unscientific footwear. Pain, quick tiring and inconvenience in walking follow.

More western newspapers have contained editorials upon the condition of the feet of the University of Oregon girls than upon any University topic since referendum days.

Examinations of the feet are to be included in the physical examinations of girls entering the university hereafter.

In spite of the agitation over our findings, we have a much better percentage of good feet here than is found in the middle west," said Miss Mabel Louise Cummings, director of the department.

tro wonderplay shown here at the Alta Theater tomorrow and Wednesday.

In this production, Mr. Steger, who has long been a favorite on the speaking stage and screen, makes his debut under Metro auspices. He is provided with an excellent role, that of a tender-hearted old man whose love for his only son is blinded through his constant devotion to him. It is in such parts as this that Mr. Steger excels. Many critics have called him the "David Warfield of the Screen," so finished is his performance in these heart-rending characterizations. Mr. Steger occupies a place that is unique in his profession. He began his career and continued for several years as a baritone singer of much ability. He was in grand opera and later in musical productions of the better kind, that thrived on Broadway a few years ago.

After his singing voice failed, Mr. Steger took up dramatic work, and in that realm achieved the greatest success of his career. He is perhaps best known to theatergoers for his artistic performance in "The Fifth Commandment." This first served him as a starring vehicle in vaudeville, where he appeared as a headliner for seven years. The dramatic sketch was then elaborated into a play, and Mr. Steger repeated his success of the two-day. Later "The Fifth Commandment" was made into a motion picture production, and served to introduce Mr. Steger to patrons of the screen.

While appearing in "The Fifth Commandment" in Los Angeles, in vaudeville, several years ago, Mr. Steger was honored with what is probably the greatest ovation ever accorded any artist on the vaudeville stage. After taking the curtain calls, the enthusiastic audience insisted on Mr. Steger and his company, repeating the sketch. In "The Blindness of Love," Metro has provided Mr. Steger with a similarly strong role, which wins and holds the sympathy of the spectators.

MAY ROBSON SCORES IN "A NIGHT OUT"

No more pleasing or delightful picture has been seen for some time than the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon drama now showing at the Pastime. May Robson, the celebrated stage star, has the leading role in the play "A Night Out," which has been her vehicle on the speaking stage for a number of years. Less than two years ago she appeared at the Oregon theater in this play.

Tomorrow a new picture will take the screen. Mutual Masterpictures present "As a Woman Sows," featuring Gertrude Robinson and Alexander Gladden.
