U. S. NURSE BACK FROM WAR ZONE PRAISES SPIRIT OF WOUNDED "TOMMIES."

MISS MILDRED ELSIE GRAVES, BRIGHTLY GIVEN HER BY WOUNDED SOLDIERS

BOSTON, Mass., May 15.—Unstinted praise of the spirit of wounded British soldiers is given by Miss Mildred Elsie Graves, of West Roxbury, who has just returned from the English hospital at Wimereux, France. She was a member of the Second Harvard Unit of Nurses, and the youngest nurse in the hospital.

Describing some of her experiences she said: "I say some terrible shrapnel cases while at Wimereux. Men without hips, jaws, arms, legs, shoulders, and still other simply peppered with small shot. How they could remain alive is a miracle. And yet a large number do recover."

"The 'Tommies' are simply wonderful. Such cheerfulness is simply remarkable. Always a cheerful smile or a joke, no matter whether they could move or not. Suffering the agonies of the wound, with all sorts of terrible afflictions, meant nothing to them—they were simply pure grit."

"Not once in all the hundreds of patients which passed through our ward did I ever get a cross word or an unkind remark. Always helping 'sister' as they called us, whether we were making their beds, applying dressings to their wounds or feeding them. Always extremely polite, they would do anything in their power to help the nurse."

"And they would tell you about what they did or what they saw on the battlefield. Preposterous tales, some of them that a little simple nurse would swallow with eyes and mouth wide open. But the moment that you left the room, they would start laughing, the story would be repeated all along the line and for days the poor nurse would suffer grins from all."

on the manufactured article. He may go east soon to superintend the first output of the runners. Many Pendleton people are familiar with the invention as a model was used for sometime on a go-cart at the Brown furniture store. It is so designed that a go-cart may be raised to or lowered from a curb without any jar or particular care being used. Those who have used it declare it will prove a great convenience to city mothers.

LACK OF HARMONY IN MOST AFFAIRS IS WORLD'S CURSE

PETER COLLINS OF BOSTON IN ADDRESS HERE POINTS OUT OUR TROUBLES.

In the Family, in the Church and Between Capital and Labor, the Old Spirit of 13-Feeling Keeps the World in a Turn-of; Large Audience Hears Address.

Lack of harmony in the family, in society, between religious faiths and too often between labor and capital, breeding irreverence which causes bitterness and strife is what's wrong with the world, according to Peter Collins of Boston, a lecturer of national repute, who addressed a large audience in the Oregon theater Saturday evening, under the auspices of the local Knights of Columbus lodge.

Peter Collins, who is a young man, and a gifted orator, is not a philosopher or a theologian, but a workman, his trade being electrician. He was a member of the first industrial commission of Illinois and has become nationally prominent in his championship of almost any cause that will improve the world for its people. His address was particularly interesting in that it was the first big public effort of the Knights of Columbus, a fraternal order of Catholics, to promote more harmony between the different religious faiths in this city.

That the lecture was a big success from this standpoint was evidenced by the applause given the speaker by the mixed audience.

Harmony is Fundamental. Harmony was one of the essential laws of God and is the very foundation of civilization, according to the speaker, and yet in this day of supposedly advanced civilization one out of every 20 marriages results in a divorce. This illustrated the lack of harmony in the family.

In speaking of lack of harmony between men and women over religion he said God endows every man and woman with a free will and conscience and the right to determine any kind of worship, while the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God go absolutely hand in hand. "Good will ought to prevail among men irrespective of religious belief. In the birth of this nation, Protestant, Catholic, Jew and Gentile worked together, fought and bled together and they have worked together in its conservation. Therefore harmony ought to prevail between them." In arguing for religion he stated that science does not and could not abolish religion. "In fact it proves religion and yet people are listening to the idle prating of street orators who characterize the bible history as myths. This irreverence is the cause of the lack of harmony."

He said what the world needed as a remedy was to take the ten commandments and live up to them.

Capital and Labor. Describing the labor movement as the righteous expression of the hopes, aspirations and ideals of the laboring classes and stating that labor believed in rights, duties and responsibilities, he dwelt at length on the troubles which have too often occurred between labor and capital.

In the case of women he said that the legislatures could settle the problem with minimum wages but the only remedy in the case of the men was the remedy of a Christian life becoming more universal.

He also dwelt on the evils of employment telling how there were from 8 to 12 per cent of the men out of employment all the time, and yet he said that all who had studied the problem agreed that there were more jobs or more employment than men in this country, and that the unemployment of this 8 to 12 per cent cost the country one billion dollars annually, or about a fourth of the total amount of money in the country.

He held of his connection and experiences with the Illinois industrial commission, of the deplorable working conditions discovered and urged more cooperation with the federal employment of men, but the greatest difficulty lies in the fact that labor is crowded into industrial centers and bears not of a job elsewhere. In this problem the government employment bureau can be made of great assistance."

YES, It's Going to Happen at "Sayres".

Mr. Farmer Here are a few FORD facts and figures. No one ever criticizes the farmer for keeping a driving team, yet our statistics show that it requires five acres of land to produce feed for one horse—and Webster says, "Statistics are a collection of facts." Now, if it takes five acres of land to produce feed for one horse, we must certainly charge the value of this land up to power as that if all we derive from it. So, if a man has a driving team worth $250, harness worth $40, buggy worth $100 and his land is worth $150 per acre, he has invested $1890 in his driving outfit. To find his annual expense on this outfit allow interest, taxes and insurance at 6 per cent—$115.40, cost of farming ten acres, $100, repairs and shoeing $11.00 and you have an annual expense of $225; and 1 haven't mentioned stable and shed room at all, as a car would require shelter as well as horses and rig. When a man changes from a driving team to an automobile he reclains ten acres of his farm, cuts down his expense, making it possible to save time while on the road and get out and see what others are doing, and profit by their experience and best of all, to get himself and family in a better frame of mind. Is it any wonder that the automobile has brought prosperity instead of bankrupting this country as was once predicted. Go over these figures carefully and show which statement, if any, is wrong, then let us talk to you about a FORD—the real car.
