What the Picture Theaters Have to Tell You.

MARION SWAYNE STARS.

"The Net" at the Pastime Theater Presents New Idea in Picturization.

There is an ancient superstition held by the old granmas and the old men of the fisher folk that whosoever living is saved out of the sea brings with it a curse and bad luck to the person who saves it.

So the bent old women and the gnarled old men all wagged their heads and crooned wisely at each other when the young fisherman saved a wet, clinging, mysterious girl from the sea. She was lashed to a floating spar, and he carried her unconscious to his cabin, where his mother could tend and bring her back to life.

And it is the story of what happened to the young fisherman and the maiden from the sea that makes up the plot for a most unusual and interesting photodrama entitled "The Net," a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, which comes to the pastime theater today.

It is seldom that a picture of such real photographic beauty, such wonder of setting and such real dramatic and yet simplicity of plot development is produced. The settings of the Florida beaches, and the warm sunshine of tropical mornings and afternoons made a marvelous background for the picture. The fisher people with their nets and boats and their poor little cabins are picturesque and quaint, and the mystery girl from the sea makes strong contrast to their simple daughters.

Marian Swayne, the dear little actress, who has made friends wherever her pictures have gone, is presented in her first Mutual picture in "The Net."

As a physician, ever the right to take human life? This is the theme of the strong play "Doctor Neighbor," which is presented as a Red Feather Production. The play was written by Agnes Hay, and produced for the Universal by Lloyd B. Carleton, with Hobart Bosworth in the title role. The theme is one of enthralling interest at all times, and special attention was drawn to the question recently by the celebrated case of the Chicago mother who gave permission to her physician to put a merciful end to her defective child. The question is handled in a very large way in this photo-drama, and the decision, at least of the characters concerned in it, is the orthodox one, that the doctor has no right voluntarily to end a human existence, no matter how agonizing it may be, and no matter how the faculties of the patient may be impaired.

Temple Today

He who would know the truth must not shun the darkness that hides it. The reason for the flower and the weed is found alike in their roots and the earth that nourishes them.

We can't pluck the weed and leave the root and think we're rid of weeds forever.

We can't kill the "villain" off in the last paragraph and feel "all's right with the world."

It is only by digging deep into the evils of our social life that we can ever hope to root them out.

In "Who's Guilty?" a series of 14 stories by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, there is a splendid brave attempt made to bring the evaded questions of life up to you for your consideration.

Maternity! The Word of Words

It is written into life's expectations that motherhood is the one sublime accomplishment. And if there is anything, no matter how simple, how apparently trivial it may seem, if it can aid, help, assist or in any way comfort the expectant mother, it is a blessing. And such is a remedy called "Mother's Friend." You apply it over the stomach muscles. It is gently rubbed on the surface, and makes the muscles pliant; this relieves the strain on the stomach, natural expansion takes place without undue effect upon the nerves. And as the time approaches, the mind has gone through a period of repose, of gentle expectancy, and this has an unquestioned influence upon the future child. That this is true is evidenced by the fact that three generations of mothers have used and recommended "Mother's Friend." Ask your nearest druggist for a bottle of this splendid remedy. He will get it for you. And then write to Bradford E. Collier Co., 407 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a most interesting book of information to prospective mothers. It is mailed free. Write today. It is a book you will enjoy.
