WORK OF CATCHING WILD ANIMALS FOR CIRCUS IS NO SNAP

GREATEST DANGER COMES TO MEN WHO GO INTO HAUNTS FOR SPECIMENS

Few who see wild animals in cages realize the vast amount of trouble, danger and expense necessary to get them there. The greatest danger lies in capturing the wild animals in their native country. With the John Robinson Shows which will give two performances in Pendleton, June 14, there are several hundred wild animals most of which were captured in the forest and jungles of their native country.

There is no more ticklish or dangerous task than tracking lions in the vast Nubian deserts. The scorching sun pours down with such force that few men can stand it. The effect on the eyes is blinding. There is little or no shade. The wariest and most careful hunter may be tracking an animal, and at the same time be tracked by the animal he is seeking, who may imitate, and at the same time be tracked. For capturing full-grown lions large traps of various forms are used. One trap is square, one of the sides lifting upon a spring like the old-fashioned mouse trap. This trap is baited with a piece of fresh meat, and as soon as the lion has entered the trap the door shuts down and he is a prisoner. More than a score of lions with the John Robinson Circus were captured in this manner.

Elephants are generally caught in nooses. A number of men surround the elephant after they have previously found a circle of tire about the beast. The fire gets closer and closer to the elephant and finally a noose is thrown over his head. He is then securely tied to a tree and allowed to remain there until quiet. Tame elephants are then brought into use and appear to be a sort of persuasive in making the huge animals tractable.

In catching snakes various devices are used. One is to set the grass on fire in a circle where it is known that snakes have hiding places. As they rush out they are caught in large nets founded on wooden hoops to which is attached a large box.
