THE PATH.

There's a path that leads to Nowhere
 In a meadow that I know,
 Where an inland island rises
 And the stream is still and slow;
 There it wanders under willows,
 And beneath the silver green
 Of the birches' silent shadows
 Where the early violets lean.

Other pathways lead to Somewhere,
 But the one I love so well
 Has no end and no beginning—
 Just the beauty of the dell,
 Just the wild flowers and the lilies,
 Yellow striped as adders' tongues,
 Seem to satisfy my pathway
 As it winds their scents among.

There I go to meet the Spring-time,
 When the meadow is aglow,
 Marigolds amid the marshes—
 And the stream is still and slow.
 There I find my fair oasis,
 And with care-free feet I tread
 For the pathway leads to Nowhere,
 And the blue is overhead.

All the ways that lead to Somewhere
 Echo with the hurrying feet
 Of the Struggling and the Striving,
 But the way I find so sweet
 Hides me dream and bids me linger,
 Joy and Beauty are its goal—
 On the path that leads to Nowhere
 I have sometimes found my soul.

AMERICANISM FIRST

In his able keynote speech yesterday Martin Glynn drew a truthful picture of conditions under the Wilson administration. The policy of the president with reference to European affairs has been in accord with the best American principles and traditions. He has followed in the footsteps of Washington, Lincoln and Grant. He follows the path of neutrality but where our rights are infringed upon he calls the offending nation to time.

It so happens that the most flagrant outrages against Americans in the present war have been by Germany. It was the sworn duty of the president to act and he did so with vigor and firmness. His position was so sound that the German government admitted the justice of his contentions and altered its submarine policy to comply with the rights of neutral citizens under international law.

But some German-Americans in this country are not willing to follow the lead of the German government in this matter. They put misguided love of Germany above love of America. They denounce President Wilson for having performed a plain and solemn duty for the American people. They are in league to defeat him and to this end are working through a well trained organization in 39 states of the union.

It is the open boast of the German-American alliance that they were largely responsible for the defeat of Roosevelt at Chicago and the nomination of Hughes. They are now for Hughes and against Wilson. German papers published in this country denounce the president in most vehement terms. Often their abuse is scurrilous and insulting not only to the president but to the nation.

The German-American procedure is a monumental blunder. It is a line of action that truly Americanized Germans cannot stand for. The stars and stripes must be paramount in this country. The president has stood for neutrality, not for favoritism to any belligerent. No foreign influence should be injected into the politics of this nation and it is intolerable than an organization like the German-American alliance should be trying to dictate who shall be president of the United States.

At present this feature of the presidential campaign is uppermost. It is a situation to make men think and they are thinking. It may or it may not be his fault but Mr. Hughes is in an awkward position. If the situation continues as it is at present the republican nominee cannot expect to have and he will not have the support of the millions of voters who irrespective of party ties stand first of all for America and American principles.

SENTIMENT AT PASADENA

On numerous occasions recently straw ballots taken in different parts of the country have shown an unmistakable sentiment for the reelection of President Wilson. This has been true even in rock ribbed republican states. From a party point of view, Pasadena, Cal., is republican by ten to one. But in a straw ballot formally conducted along the line of a presidential primary, 340 high school students cast their ballots in favor of the present chief executive, while Roosevelt took second place with 255 votes.

Of th latter, 133 votes went to Roosevelt as a candidate on the republican ticket, and 122 as a progressive. Hughes ran a very poor third with a vote of 89, while Ford, who ran fourth, tallied only 21. Johnson got 14 votes, Root 7, Cummins and Burton 3 each, while La Follette, Sherman and Bryan received one vote each. Stating the results in another way, there were 351 votes for the democratic icket, 196 for the progressives and 189 for the republicans.

While the ballot at Pasadena was taken prior to the conventions the results are nevertheless sufficient to show that Wilson has a lead that no opponent can hope to overcome when consideration is given to the fact he needs only a few northern or western states to make his election certain.

SHORTAGE OF PAPER

On April 5 an order issued in Paris to save and gather papers and bits of paper of all kinds—newspapers, wrapping papers, writing paper, old books and records—everything of the genus papyrus except soiled scraps.

The Figaro in publishing the order, states that newspapers can hardly continue publication under the prevailing prices due to a shortage that can only be relieved by ensemble action on the part of the public.

The greatest consumer of paper is the ammunition manufacturer, as all cartridges are wrapped in paper, or put in cartons, made of paper.

The newspaper claims that the momentary shortage could be relieved by saving illustrated sheets and daily papers, as the printer's ink does not stand in the way, nor the common writing ink.

In Lyons, where the people have been gathering papers since three months, 70 to 80 compressed bundles are delivered to the government each day. Not only is the collection and quick disposal of papers an element of saving, but it is one of cleanliness as well.

Says the Paris Temps: "The recent order to gather all sorts of clean paper bits in Paris will go hand in hand with the previous regulation of cleanliness. Newspapers are a great source of disorder after they are perused and discarded, and system will subserve the two purposes admirably."
