LITTLE RAGGED BABY,

There's a little ragged baby In most every woman's heart, Like the kind you see so often Toddling at some big child's side; • And the love that makes them . holy.

And that sets them so apart, What a wonder and a magic in its tide!

Just a little ragged baby-But it's her child, Heaven knows; And it's not a point of beauty Nor a question of its clothes: It's the baby, just the baby,

With its spiritual hold on love

That sets it in its tarnished gov All heavenly gifts above.

At the doorstep in an alley,

At some garden gateway down Where the fringes of green coun-

 Kep on creeping into town—
Every ragged little baby In its own sweet world apart Reigns with unabated glory In some woman's tender heart

The reward for such efforts by this nation will consist in putting an end to the ever-recurring revolutions in the benighted land. It will enhance our position with other nations. perform our duty under the Monroe doctrine and insure our border from depredations that have become intolerable.

The benefits from the Mexican standpoint will be even greater. Mexico will be better off under an American protectorate than under the heel of first one warring faction and then another. Industry and education will be made to thrive and prosperity will be in store for a land that has been long despoiled. For an example of what an American protectorate means the Mexicans have to look only at Cuba and Porto Rico.
