action of the legislature in depriving that school of funds and gave earnest support on both occasions when Weston was before the people under the initiative. Such support would have been given this year had Weston taken action. But Weston did not take such steps and reports were received here of possible action by other towns outside of Umatilla county. These reports together with various other considerations all very encouraging from the standpoint of a Pendleton normal led local people to get busy. This may be enlightening to some who may think this place should have refrained from action out of regard for Weston.

There are reasons for believing that Weston people themselves would rather see a normal school here than see one established in some other county of eastern Oregon. It is logical they should because this is the banner county of eastern Oregon and the most central county, geographically.

THAT REJOICING IN BERLIN

ACCORDING to an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin the feeling in that city is jubilant over the impending trouble between the United States and Mexico. It is said nothing would be more pleasing to Berlin than to see this country forced into a war with Mexico and then to have Japan line up with the southern country against us.

Such feelings as that no doubt exist in the German capital and very likely the German wish for trouble between Uncle Sam and Mexico will be realized. Intervention is drawing nearer each day and a conflict seems inevitable.

But if the German-Americans are to succeed in their campaign for the defeat of President Wilson this fall is it not a mistake for Berlin to be so free in expressing its joy over present developments?

Too much rejoicing in the fatherland may be bad for the German favorite in our presidential race.

THE POSITION IN HOLLAND

THE position of Holland in regard to the war has from the first, been one of extreme difficulty. The government early announced the neutrality of the country, and has sought to maintain this neutrality, both in letter and spirit, ever since. Holland has of course, all along held herself free to watch the situation, and to reverse her policy at any time should the highest interests of the country call for such revision. The Dutch, however, are very far from taking their stand simply on the basis of self-interest. In the course of his able survey of the position of the country in the Second Chamber some time ago Mr. Van der Linden, the prime minister, expressed himself very forcibly on this point. On all questions involving justice and humanity, there could be, he maintained, no such thing as a neutral attitude. With us, Mr. Van der Linden said, the chief consideration is that justice shall be restored. We do not need, therefore, scrupulously to conceal our opinions. We in this country should speak freely in defense of justice and humanity, but we should insult neither the one side nor the other of the belligerent nations.

Holland's neutral attitude, as is made clear in the statement just issued from the Dutch general headquarters, has not prevented the government from providing for all eventualities. The statement declares that the Dutch forces are prepared and equipped for anything they may be called upon to do, and that should the necessity arise the country can face the prospect of war with confidence. Since 1914, the statement declares, the workshops have been enlarged and many private factories equipped for producing war material. The supply of munitions for rifles and guns has increased in an important measure, and the capacities of state and private factories guarantee adequate replenishment.

Why the Dutch general headquarters should have chosen the present moment to issue this statement, it is not easy to decide. The Dutch government, however, it is safe to assume, has from the first recognized that Holland owes her immunity from attack, to a very large extent, to the fact that, as a "clearing house," she is much more valuable than as a war terrain. At any moment, however, the preponderance of advantage may shift from one scale to the other, and it is against such a contingency, amongst many others, that Holland is preparing.—Christian Science Monitor.

newspaper, magazines, etc., the N. K. Fairbank Company have sent a number of their gentlemanly young salesmen to Pendleton for the purpose of explaining personally direct to each housewife just what their well known product Gold Dust, is made of, is good for and what the company means by its slogan "Let the Gold Dust Twins Do Your Work."

This method of advertising seems to be a very effective one, as the young men are able to explain many uses of the product which are not generally known to housewives, as well as showing how to use it economically without waste.

As the Fairbank Company is noted for the care with which their traveling representatives are hired, and the method of their advertising is to get the trial size packages of Gold Dust from Pendleton grocers rather than to give out free samples or sell the manufacturer's own goods at the grocer's loss, the East Oregonian is glad to approve this way of advertising and to suggest to its readers that at least the courtesy of a hearing be extended to the Fairbank Company's young men, as much information of value can undoubtedly be received from them. The reputation of their company and their product insures that housewives will not be unduly "postured."

went their way through the downtown section headed by the band.

It will be the big Chautauqua boost parade and every automobile owner in the city is invited to get in line, not forgetting of course to bring his automobile along with him. The various sales agencies in the city have promised to donate as many cars as possible, and a great many private owners have promised to be on hand.

The parade will start at 7:30 from the Commercial Club corner and the cars will be decorated at this point with flags suitable for the occasion.

Booster hats will also be given away by the local Chautauqua organization just before the parade starts.

Show at Round-Up Park. At a spirited meeting held this morning in the Commercial Club rooms final arrangements were made for the Chautauqua meeting which starts next Wednesday evening. It was decided to have the grounds at Round-up Park instead of the north side. Sawdust will be spread under the tent and the place will be sprinkled every evening to insure a clean tent for the Chautauquans.

THE LAND THAT'S ALWAYS SUMMER.

There's a land that's always summer, and I'll tell you how to go—
Take the silver path of morning where the rhododendrons grow;
And it's not the flowers that make it, but the love that's in the heart
For the beauty of the blossoms set in winding leagues apart.
A starry land of singing,
Where the night is as the day
With the silver moon of summer
Walking through the groves of May.
There's a land that's always summer in your bosom, if it's true
That you love the gentle valleys as the azure violets do;
For amid the toiling tempest of the winter with you'll feel
Breath of beauty and of blossoms through your spirit's window steal.
Breath of morning and of music
That will take you far and free
To the dreams of spring departed
With the soft winds o'er the sea.

PENDLETON AND WESTON

THE move for obtaining a state normal school at Pendleton did not originate with local businessmen and it has not been the intention of those in charge to be unjust to Weston, the town where the Eastern Oregon normal was formerly conducted.

On the other hand had Weston seen fit to initiate a bill this year to revive the normal there strong support for the move would have been given by Pendleton. The East Oregonian was a warm supporter of the normal at Weston. This newspaper bitterly opposed the

LAST TIME TODAY

William Collier in "The No Good Guy"

"That's the funniest picture I ever saw" is the way you will describe this latest TRIANGLE PLAY.

William Collier, the popular Broadway star, appears for the first time in five-reel comedy drama, and the result is a full hour and a half of comedy so clever that you'll slap your neighbor on the shoulder at the right or clasp hands with the person on your left as the great work continues.

If you've ever seen Collier on the stage you'll appreciate how droll and comical he can be. Thrills, laughter, fights and gun-play all together make this one of the best TRIANGLE PLAYS.
