This is strictly a cash store, selling for cash only enables us to make lower prices than if we sold on credit. The cash buyer gets more for his money than one who asks for credit, because it costs money to carry accounts. This extra cost is made up by keeping bookkeepers, extra clerks, lost accounts, in fact when you ask for credit you ask for an accommodation and you have to pay for it, and so does the cash buyer if he trades at any other place than a strictly cash store.

Our meat department is the best equipped plant in Umatilla county; everything under glass. We buy for cash all veal, chickens, eggs and produce. We invite the farmers to call in and inspect our up-to-date Meat Market and Grocery Store.

Downey's U. S. Inspected Meat is positively the best meat on the market.

GOLF EXPERT GIVES ADVICE ON HOW TO DEVELOP PLAYERS

G. H. EDDY WRITES TO THE VOICE UPON WAYS TO OBTAIN GOOD FORM.

Even Those Who Start in Middle Life to Play the Game Can Become Exceptional Players if They Will Devote Much Practice to the Art. Not Too Strenuous.

(By G. H. Eddy.)
Some fifteen years ago, I venture to say, golf was not heard of on this coast. But so rapidly has the game grown that we find it played in every town that has a population of ten thousand or more. The past five years have seen a good many baseball players turning their attention to golf, finding it more fascinating as it depends entirely on his own ability, not like some other ball games where it requires a team to play it.

Golf has been considered by all doctors to be the best exercise for restoring health, as it develops every muscle in the body if played right. Those who begin at middle age can become good golfers even if not the best. Muscles that have been dormant for years are brought into action, thus stimulating new energy and consequently adding years to life. There has been some objection that golf was too strenuous for older people. There is absolutely no danger if he has a competent instructor. It is a great mistake to start playing the game without an instructor as the tendency is to hold the body too rigid and the club too firm and thus liable to strain the muscles of the heart.

One has to remember the club only weighs from 14 to 17 ounces, which means he has to relax his muscles in order to get the swing.

Golf is a game which is played from the wrists. It is sometimes said that there are two kinds of golfers. One kind is those who are born golfers and some seem to fall into the game quite naturally and get brilliant results. But the majority of people are anything but born golfers and so it is a great advantage to begin the game young for the player then acquires a certain in making his strokes that is very hard to acquire after.

Why so many fail to get on is because they do not try hard enough and cannot give enough time for practice. Even the most brilliant players of the game have their weak points and any player will get on better afterwards if he thinks and studies his game when he can get a quiet hour to himself.

I have had people come to me for lessons and in a very short time I have found their mind somewhere else and oftentimes I will be explaining and talking my head off and on looking up I find they are looking somewhere else. Now, when this happens I can't help them to get any result from lessons. Both the teacher and pupils must put their heart and soul in the work they have on hand. If a player wants to reduce his handicaps nothing but hard, steady practice and some one standing over him pointing out his faults because there must be something wrong with his game, otherwise he would go on improving. Every scratch player has found that to be the hardest period of his game. Some may think when they are down to 10 handicaps that they know enough about the game and don't need instructing. It is true they may know all about the game but the point is they can't see their faults and require a competent teacher standing over them. Even the best professionals have to take a lesson occasionally and follow out the instructing as near as possible which he has already had.

A new player oftentimes plays a better game the first month than he does for some time after. For a month or so he will play fairly good golf, then he will fall back for a while and play worse than he did at the start. This happens to beginners, his game comes back to his game he finds he is a little margin to the good and so it goes on for 4 or 5 years when his game will stop improving. This happens sometimes when he is an 18 handicap and sometimes as low as 10 handicaps. Now when this happens, I advise him to get in and take lessons and work hard if he wants to improve. Of course, if he is satisfied with his game, lessons would not do him any good. To get any benefit from lessons one has to enter into it and think of nothing else.

There will be golf lessons continued in this paper during the summer and those that are interested in golf should not fail to read them.

Library News
A group of new books on miscellaneous subjects are today placed on the "New Books" shelves at the public library.
Ames—Higher individualism. "Eight sermons delivered at Harvard University by one of the most noted teachers of psychology of religion in this country. They emphasize the social nature of the individual and the value of social service, and among other things the world-old quest for a more abundant and ideal life. An earnest book for the scholar or thinker."
Picke—Chans on Japanese prints. "This book will appeal to the print collector, but the first chapter, a preliminary survey, considering the general nature of Japanese prints, and the technique of their production and their aesthetic characteristics, will serve admirably to introduce the subject to the general reader. It gives an interpretation of an article, even quite different from that of our western world and makes it comprehensible to our western mind."
Gates—Through college on nothing, a year. "How this ex-gamin was converted into a Princeton member of dining, culture and income is as fascinating a tale as any medieval romance, and of far more value to high school men who fancy themselves financially debarrated from a college training."

Hill—Canning, preserving and jelly making. Mrs. Hill, whose books have been used in American homes for the past fifteen years, has presented in condensed and simple form information gained from her own and others' experience and from the recommendations of the United States department of agriculture, and the state universities on methods of preserving fruits and vegetables. The receipts are preceded by practical descriptions of the utensils needed and the reasons for each step taken are clearly stated. Illustrations and an index complete the book's usefulness.

Holland—Butterfly guide. Those who have enjoyed "Freckles" and "Girl of the Limberlost" will be interested in this delightful butterfly book.
Dr. Holland, who is author of a larger work, "The butterfly book," has prepared this convenient pocket manual as a means of identification for the commoner species of the United States and Canada. There are descriptions of 255 species and varieties accompanied by 295 colored figures. An introduction discusses the place of butterflies in the animal kingdom, the anatomy of the butterfly, etc., and offers advice on collecting and mounting."

I Acense. "This remarkable indictment of Germany by a German has attracted world-wide attention since the appearance of the first German edition at Lausanne several months ago. It is one of the memorable books of the war. Published anonymously in Switzerland "by a German who has been holding high rank in the government service." A vehement indictment of the empire of Germany and Austria, which, the author says, "intentionally brought about the war which they had long prepared for and desired, because they thought that the moment was specially favorable for striking the blow."
Free—How farmers cooperate and double profits. "While the most comprehensive source of information on what has been done through local clubs, the grange, rural credit, and co-operative societies, it is first of all an appeal to the farmer in direct, readable chapters, to get control of his own business and to lead in the work of cooperation by which he can keep control and better prices."
Powell—Road to glory. A book of stories from American history. The title has an ironic touch, for, as the author says, "three fourths of the territory of the United States was won for us by men whose names are without significance to most Americans." The road to glory seems sometimes to

M'NARY ACCEPTS THE G. O. P. CHAIRMANSHIP

PORTLAND, Ore., July 10.—Charles L. McNary of Salem, chosen state chairman by the Oregon republican state central committee, which met at the Imperial hotel in Portland on Saturday, lost no time in accepting the position. Immediately on being notified of his selection, Mr. McNary wired back that he would accept and would work for unflinching in the position. E. D. Baldwin secretary to Congressman Sinnott, also has accepted reelection as secretary of the committee.

Just when the personnel of the executive committee of 14, of whom five are to be former progressives, will be announced is not known, but speculation is rife as to what men will come out. Among the ex-progressives mentioned are Thomas B. Neuhäuser, A. E. Clark, Dr. Henry W. Aldo Coe and George Arthur Brown.

Delegates in Two Camps.
The meeting was replete with oratory, with Hughes and harmony as the keynote.

The delegates were obviously divided into two camps, those who wished to re-elect Charles B. Moore as chairman and those who desired a younger man who would make a strong appeal to the progressives.
Mr. Moore had many supporters but he withdrew his name as soon as the nominations were closed.

As retiring state chairman he opened the meeting with a short address, calling attention to the fact that it was in the nature of a homecoming. Part of the family had been away for four years, he said, but were now returning and some of them were present at the meeting. He said he was going to call upon a few of those for short addresses, and first introduced George Arthur Brown.
Mr. Brown spoke of the cleavage of the past but said that those times had passed. He urged, however, that in the organization of the state committee as chairman be selected who would be acceptable to the progressives of the state.

AMERICAN HELP IS URGED TO SAVE CHINA

DETROIT, Mich., July 11.—Investment of United States capital in China to prevent further Japanese aggression was advocated here by Charles Denby, former United States consular general at Shanghai and ex-secretary of the provisional government of Tien Tsin under appointment from the allied powers. Denby had just returned from an extensive business trip in the orient.
"China sees in every cent invested in that country a hold on the United States which will guarantee her against Japanese aggression," Denby said.
