The Commercial Association at their meeting last night issued an invitation to the Portland men to visit Pendleton and a committee was voted to be appointed to look after the entertainment of the visitors.

Kills Big Rattlesnake.

George Friedler, who lives at 621 Maple street, yesterday killed a big rattlesnake on the Northern Pacific tracks near the bridge just above the city. He is a member of the section crew and was returning from work when the rattler crossed his path. It was dispatched with a crowbar. As a result of the kill, Mr. Friedler has a trophy of nine rattles and a button with which the big snake was equipped.

Helped Build Big Elevator.

Leonard Rhodes of this city, who returned from Maupin, Ore., last week where he learned that his daughter was ill with typhoid, had been employed by the Tumalum Lumber Co. in the building of a big grain elevator at that place. The structure will be completed this week, he states, and will be prepared to handle this season's crop. The elevator will have a capacity of 100,000 bushels and a working capacity of 1500 bushels per hour. It is 88 feet high. Mr. Rhodes reports that the elevator will be operated by a stock company formed by 100 men, mostly farmers who have decided to harvest their crops without the use of sacks. Another big elevator is being built at Madras further up the Deschutes. Mr. Rhodes says.

PORT DISTRICT IS ABANDONED. (Continued from page one) neys acting for the remonstrators presented their arguments to the county court, contending that the formation of such a district would be both illegal and inequitable. Besides a remonstrance filed by the O-W, R. & N. and the Northern Pacific and one by Jay Bowerman of Portland, former acting governor, a remonstrance was filed by voters and property owners of the proposed district. This remonstrance contains 590 names. Of this number 484 are said to be legal voters in the proposed district and the others owners of land affected. Of the 484, it is the claim of the remonstrators, 255 are registered voters. The petitions, filed several weeks ago asking for an election to decide whether or not the district should be created, there were 60 names. Of this number 26 have signed the remonstrance and 13, according to the remonstrators, are not registered in the district. Thus, they contend, there are only 21 registered voters asking for the district against 255 registered voters objecting to it. Legal Objections Raised. J. H. Raley, who was one of the attorneys for the remonstrators and who made the argument this morning, contended strongly that the port law of Oregon does not in letter or spirit permit the formation of such a district as is proposed. He quoted from the law to the effect that port districts could be created on streams navigable "from the sea" and contended that those words were placed there deliberately to define the limits of the application of the law. In other words, he contended that ports must be located only where they may be accessible to sea-going craft. He maintained that Umatilla is not so situated because the Celilo Falls is a natural barrier. Only by artificial means, namely the building of the Celilo canal, has made continuous navigation on the river possible and the Columbia is not, therefore, a navigable stream in the sense that the law means, he contended. He spent much time in explaining this point to the court and filed an argument with the court. He also read from the remonstrance of Jay Bowerman who, as an attorney, contended that the law was meant only to apply to such ports as could be formed on tidewater. Col. Raley also contended that the primary object of the proposed formation of a district is to build a road and not to build a port. He read the port law and its amendments. One amendment permitted the building of railroads and, the attorney contended, even if this could be interpreted to include wagon or truck roads such purpose could only be incidental and not primary. The remonstrances have no legal effect but were filed to give to the court some evidence of the sentiment among those affected. Col. Raley contended that it is within the power of the court, if they are shown conclusively that the proposed election would only result in the defeat of the project and put the county to unnecessary expense, to refuse to call it. Moreover, he contended there is no equity in the law which permits only voters within the proposed district to cast ballots and excludes non-resident property owners who must pay a portion of the tax levied. Arthur Spencer, O-W, R. & N. attorney, also made an argument against the plan.
