THRILLING FRONTIER PLAY HAS CHARLEY RAY A HERO

"The Deserter" Shows Triangle's Young Star in Drama of United States Army Post.

Charley Ray is the star of "The Deserter." Triangle feature which will be seen at the Temple theater today and tomorrow.

The story deals with stirring events at a frontier army post in 1868. Ray has the role of Lieutenant Parker, who has lost his heart to Barbara Taylor, daughter of the colonel in charge of the post. But Barbara's affections have been won by Captain Turner, and when the handsome young lieutenant asks her for her hand she has to say no. Barbara does promise the disconsolate Parker that she will give him the first walk at the approaching Halloween ball. But when the time comes the first walk finds her whirling about the floor with her intended. The young lieutenant has a nasty temper, and it becomes inflamed forthwith with anger and jealousy. He leaves the ball in a rage and goes to a dive on the outskirts of the post, where he tries to drown his sorrows in bad whiskey and worse company. The gamblers at the resort try to cheat at cards, and a fight starts. The place is full of soldiers, who come to the aid of the young officer; and a general melee follows, which becomes so violent that a detachment is sent from the post. Turner leaves the ball to command them, and is amazed to find Parker in the middle of the mixup. He rebukes the boy still further, and he strikes his superior officer. His arrest follows.

PHOTOGRAPHING A MOUNTAIN STORM

Do you recall the sense of triumph you felt when you snapped a streak of lightning with your '3x Kodak'? This much granted, imagine the joy of a moving picture camera man atop the lofty Sierra Nevada mountains photographing a storm of hurricane velocity, embellished with torrential downpours of rain and quickened by an electrical demonstration right off the face of nature's dynamo—great banks of ink-black clouds that hang, seemingly, at arm's length above him. Horses running wild among the giant trees, distracted by fright; men and women working like beavers to enact the scene for subsequent display in thousands of moving picture theaters, the camera-man grinding with every ounce of vigor he possesses, that not one move may escape the picture—this is the history of a Bluebird Photoplay in the making. Elia Hall and Herbert Rawlinson, Thomas Jefferson, Marc Fenton and Robert Z. Leonard, beside the busy camera man, were engaged in just such a scene when the climax of "Little Eve Edgarton" was photographed for exhibition at the Cosy theater on Thursday and Friday, when Bluebird Day arrives. The story is based on Eleanor H. Abbott's serial, published in Everybody's Magazine, and Bluebird was quick to realize the pleasure-giving possibilities of the work it translated to the screen.

Mabel Taliaferro in Charming Sereno Story.

Mabel Taliaferro, the fascinating and talented little star, will be seen on the screen here at Alta on Tuesday and Wednesday in "God's Half Acre," one of the prettiest and most charming stories ever presented in the silent drama. The story deals with a little girl named "Blossom," the servant in an aged folks' home known as "Rainbow's End." The kindly old inmates call her "The Angel of Rainbow's End," as she is forever administering to their wants and their comforts. A well known novelist comes to the home to get material for a certain chapter in a book he is writing. But once he becomes acquainted

DEMONSTRATION TRAIN OF U. S. WILL NOT COME

Uncle Sam's demonstration train which was to have come through Pendleton this fall has turned back for lack of time. After giving public demonstrations of the working basis of practically every department of government endeavor from farming to ship building, sanitation and safety first, the big special found it necessary to return to Washington after getting as far west as Salt Lake. Originally the schedule took it through Pendleton to Portland, Spokane and Seattle.

O. W. safety first officials have been to Salt Lake to see the train before it headed back home, and declare that it was a wonderful sight and that eastern Oregon missed much when the government changed its plans. Shops, the army, the navy, agriculture, health and all the many bureaus the government operates, all came in for clear, concise and instructive display on the train.

DIVERTING SCHOOL MARRIAGE MONEY CAUSES HARDSHIPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—Early in the summer of 1914, the New York School board began withholding all payments to teachers whose absence had been excused with pay, because of illness. Finally the 12,000 teachers, who figured they had money coming to them, have been told that owing to the condition of the teachers' pension fund, that the money which they believed rightfully belonged to them, will be retained in the custody of the board of superintendents, who have charge of the payment of refunds. The result of the failure to pay these teachers will, it is feared, keep those who are in ill health at their desks rather than suffer loss of pay which they really need. It is the belief of many people that the board of superintendents in order to help the broken down pension fund, is withholding from the teachers the funds which rightfully belong to them. Many of the teachers think that discrimination is shown against them, as some of the superintending officers are allowed to take vacation for various reasons and are paid during their absence. The teachers contend that either Knickerbocker is showing himself rather a short sport in depriving them of money which they claim is clearly their due.

PASTIME SHOWING BIG FEATURE TODAY

Helen Holmes is Presented in "Judith of the Cumberlandlands."

The cast supporting Miss Holmes is particularly strong. The character parts are played by actors who have thoroughly established their ability in many powerful and exciting productions. Paul C. Hurst's work as a villain in "Whispering Smith" of the Mutual is Helen Holmes features will be remembered as an important work of realism. In "Judith of the Cumberlandlands" as Hiltchey Turentine he has a role with probably more opportunity. Leo D. Maloney, to be remembered for his work in the previous Helen Holmes features is particularly well cast as Creed in "Judith of the Cumberlandlands." The picture is produced by J. P. McGowan, whose standard of work needs no comment.

GOOD CLOTHES AND GOOD COMPANY

are two character-building influences that every man should adopt. They both tend to make a man prideful; they are assets to a man's business and social advancement; they are most economical in the long run and they wear best. Extravagance should never enter into your selection of either company or clothes beyond what you can afford. You can afford to wear "STEIN-BLOCH CLOTHES" because they wear long and faithfully; look and fit attractively; are guaranteed to the utmost and cost from $12.50 up.
