Speaking of "Bunk" Candies

For the past two years I have been the manufacturer of candies at a Main street confectionery.

During this time I have made a special study of Pendleton people's tastes and desires in the candy line so that I might cater to them intelligently and fulfill their every want. I have found the people of this city exacting and particular and take pride in the fact that I have been successful in pleasing them with my candies, such as the Britton Chocolate, etc., which were never made in Pendleton before because of the lack of materials of high quality.

I have never tried to force an article on the public, preferring to give them what they want. I have not borrowed the reputation of another candy manufacturer, preferring to build my own on my own merit. Some places find it necessary to import ability. Such places are thus indicating their lack of experience in their own business.

As I am going to manage the candy kitchen of Otto Hobbach on East Court street, I want the people of Pendleton to know that I have made a study of their wants and will be able to fill them there satisfactorily, using only the best of materials and making my candies in clean kettles, on clean tables, using clean tools and giving both quality and variety.
