HOW TO REHEAT MEAT.
Meat must only be reheated, not cooked.
Use good gravy or stock, and season well.
It is necessary to allow the meat to soak in the gravy or stock before reheating.

Rissoles should be moist inside, therefore the addition of gravy or sauce is necessary.

Less Carbon
—because Zerolene is made from Asphalt-base crude. It burns up clean, and goes out with the exhaust.

SOME PEPPER DISHES.

Another point in favor of the pepper is that it can be used both raw or cooked. As an addition to salad, it is constantly growing in favor, owing not only to its delicate flavor, but its attractive color and the possibilities which it presents to the salad-maker's knife or scissors. Many an otherwise unattractive salad can be made different by the addition of strips, sections or chopped pieces of pepper. Pepper combines well with sweet fruits, such as oranges or pineapple, and also with cabbage and tomato.

As a container for other salads, the pepper pod takes rank with the tomato cup. The lower end may be cut off neatly, the edges decorated, and this cup be filled with other mixtures in which the pepper pod itself need not be eaten. One of the attractive sour salads suitable after steak is composed of alternate sections of orange and grapefruit striped with cut pepper and covered with a French dressing, to which mustard is added.
