At the Alta.
 The Alta was packed to the doors last evening for the opening performance of the Bostonians and if hearty laughter and applause is any criterion, they scored a smashing hit with local playgoers as well as the many visitors who were in attendance.

The company of sixteen is composed almost entirely of girls, there being only one boy in the cast, Charlie Bennett, who proved to be the possessor of a delightful tenor voice as well as a most pleasing stage presence.

Doris Canfield and Patzie Henry as Mary and Mike, make a team of laugh getters that is hard to beat, their clever team work getting the most out of every line and situation in the book.

Billee O'Neil and Ina Mitchell made a charming pair of lovers and scored in their duet work.

The performance goes with a snap and the entire company seems to enjoy themselves as much as the audience.

"Iroma," a musical play of the south seas, will be the offering tonight to be followed by "The Golden Slipper," and "The Rose of Honolulu" on Saturday and Sunday.

NORMA TALMADGE AGAIN SEEN IN ROLE OF YOUNG GIRLHOOD
 Triangle Star Has Part of Youthful Artist's Model in New Play, "The Devil's Needle."

Norma Talmadge hasn't a family of Triangle kiddies in her new play, "The Devil's Needle," in which she and Tully Marshall are co-stars.

Children have seemed to attach themselves inseparably to the young star of late. In "Martha's Vindication" she became involved in a heap of trouble through taking the care of a baby which didn't belong to her. In "The Children in the House" she had a little flock of her own, and again in "Going Straight" she was the mother of a promising family.

While she unquestionably makes a charming mother—as, indeed, she is appealing in whatever role she undertakes—it proves a welcome variation to show her at intervals as an claimed treasure. We call her that advisedly, for, judging by the vast number of letters that come to her daily from chivalrous male admirers, she would not have to look far for some one to chase off jealous rivals. Of course she is in love in "The Devil's Needle." She has the role of an artist's model. Tully Marshall being the artist. But he is so shortsighted as to turn her down for another. In the end, however, her love proves greater than that of his wife.
