AEROPLANE USED FOR DUCK HUNTING OUT OVER OCEAN

Atlantic Coast Sportsman Stays Outside 2-Mile Limit to Escape Penalty.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 21.—E. Kenneth Jacoby has introduced duck shooting from his hydro-aeroplane. The sport has become popular among visitors since cooler weather interrupted the regular flying schedule. It is said to be the first time on record that actual duck killings have been made from a flying boat in the north.

Jacoby has followed the sport in the south during the winter months. In order to avoid the same laws, which make it unlawful to shoot game birds from a craft either by sail or engine, the running is done outside the three mile limit over the ocean. Once before he tried shooting from his aeroplane and was brought before the federal authorities, who claimed the hydro-aeroplane as a "power boat" and imposed a fine.
