SECRETARY BAKER SHATTERS FALSE IMPRESSION MADE BY REPUBLICAN MISQUOTATION OF HIS SPEECH

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Secretary of War Newton D. Baker has shattered the republican vision of a campaign issue created by misquotation of his recent speech in Jersey City, which had been made the subject of indignant protest and demands for his resignation by patriotic societies. "I cannot give the exact words of my Jersey City address as I had neither manuscript nor notes," says the secretary of war in a letter written from Rock Island, Ills., Oct. 24. "Neither have I seen in any complete form just what I am reported to have said but the substance and spirit of what I did say I can easily reproduce."

Describes Mexican Conditions. "I started by describing the conditions of Mexico under Diaz, the destitution and misery of the people, the revolution headed by Madero and its success. I then described Madero's assassination, the part played by Huerta, the refusal of the United States to recognize Huerta and his ultimate disappearance as a factor in the revolution. I turned then to the present condition of affairs in Mexico and asked whether they justified intervention on any truly American theory. I described their revolution as incomplete and asked what would have become of our own revolution of 1776-79 if some foreign power had become tired of the unsettled condition of our country and intervened to establish its theory of government instead of allowing our fathers to establish our liberties and give to the world the first real free government in history.

Used Washington As Example. "I then remarked that a revolution is always a grave matter and attended by conditions of disorder, that men fighting for freedom and inspired by its great ideals have to battle against an established order and until they succeed conditions are upset. I said, for instance, we say if the Mexican revolution is this that they are not all ways uniformed soldiers. Washington's army as it retreated to Valley Forge was scarcely clad. It was unpaid, unclothed and unfed, but it persisted through every hardship to its great mission.

"I said we complain of Mexico that property rights are not always respected and said among us to some extent that was no doubt true, as the so-called loyalists who adhered to the cause of King George, even the ministers of the churches, were driven out and their property destroyed during the revolution. I said it is complained that in the present state of affairs Mexico cannot pay her debts, and said nor could we until after the establishment of a stable government.

Urges Golden Rule. "In 1789 we inaugurated a proper financial system. With these premises I urged that a people who had won freedom through marvelous courage and steadfastness in the face of every peril, difficulty and discouragement should have sympathy with any other people struggling for freedom and should apply the Golden Rule to Mexico while she sought to apply a principle of our own declaration of independence and alter and establish her government as her people want it.

Called Washington Great Mind. "I said of Washington that he was undoubtedly one of the greatest men who ever lived and that no great event in history ever depended so entirely upon one man as did the American revolution on his soldiers. I said they were the brave founders of our liberty and we must be as brave in maintaining them and as generous in extending the principles they established to struggling people everywhere.

"I did not compare Washington's soldiers to Villa or to any Mexican bandits whatever. I did not say that Washington's soldiers stole anything or that they stole silver out of the churches to buy drink or for other purpose. I did not refer to Washington's soldiers as 'bad characters' or compare them with Mexicans in any particular, but on the contrary referred to the mass different in training, race and ideas from the Mexican people. I did not refer to anybody's character or accuse anybody, American or Mexican, of wrong doing. To have done so would have been wholly out of keeping with the argument I was making, which was not based on the acts of individuals but upon the necessary difficulty of a revolutionary struggle. I cannot believe that anyone will be able to accuse me of slandering the living or the dead nor can I believe that the story of the dangers encountered, the hardships endured and the steadfast course shown by our forefathers in the making of America is other than a tribute to their greatness, a claim upon our admiration and inspiration to our patriotism."

BISHOP M'CONNELL'S VIEW

I favor the re-election of President Wilson because of my interest in the Mexican question. I believe that Mr. Wilson can be depended on to think of Mexico as well as of American interests. I can find nothing in the program of the republican party or in the speeches of its candidate to convince me that a republican administration will do anything more than look after American interests. Looking after American interests solely without regard to Mexico's welfare, will lead inevitably to war. We are saying a great deal these days about the duties of strong nations to weak nations. The disregard of the rights of small European nations by great European nations arouses us very much. If we wish to show our sincerity in this matter we can do so by sustaining Mr. Wilson in his resistance to the forces which make for the military conquest of Mexico. Making all allowance for any reasonable criticism to be passed upon President Wilson, he has doggedly maintained that there is a Mexican side of this whole question. Only a leader who keeps before us that there is a Mexican side can keep us out of war. The surest way to war is to look just at our own side. With war on Mexico there will be a setback to the establishment of friendly relations with all Latin-America.

RELIGIOUS REVIVAL PLANNED IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Oct. 26.—King George and Queen Mary and many members of the royal household attended a special religious service in Buckingham palace last night in connection with the "National Mission" which is a plan for a national religious revival. Services similar to those held in the palace are being held throughout the kingdom this month.

BARY GAS PLANT AFTER LUNCH OF CALCIUM CARBIDE

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., Oct. 27.—The year old son of Edward Parr is in a serious condition in the state hospital as the result of becoming a human generator of acetylene gas. The child, while creeping about the floor of his home, found a can of calcium carbide and devoured a quantity of the chemical. The resulting chemical process generated inflammable gas, and for some time it appeared that the youngster would die.

Fortunately, no one lighted a match in his vicinity and eventually he was relieved by the hospital physicians and now is believed to be recovering.

As the war in Europe progresses the annual report of the Smithsonian institution, giving the scientific advance of the world, becomes thinner with each successive volume.
