The Weakly Bulldogger

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1917.

From Bulldogger to Bookdogger.
Editor Bulldogger:

I note with much interest that you have under consideration a plan to manufacture a "Fountain Pen Plank" for use in these bone-dry days. I am satisfied that you will find a ready market if you will furnish a bottle of filler with each sale.

Truly yours,
A PROSPECTIVE CUSTOMER.

Probably Used Chickens.

Stanley Jewett of the biological survey is making a trip to visit the government trappers in the northwest. In a letter written to Inspector Averill, he told of the various animals trapped and shot by one hunter, and ended by saying, "Caught an auto at Umatilla." Averill wrote back at once, "Please specify in what state trap you caught it and what bait you used."

A Bone-Dry Ballad.

(Note: Should be sung while standing on the brink of the river.)
Oh, the bone-dry days are on us,
The bone-dry days are here,
What will I do for whisky now,
What will I do for beer?

Already now, my lips are parched,
My throat grows hot and hotter,
How can I slake the burning thirst?
There's nothing left but water.

O cruel law, O cruel state
That robs me of my liquor,
Sure, hanging were more merciful,
And death would come much quicker.

But, Water I've not drunk thee yet,
Save mixed in with a toddy,
Thou canst not own my spirit now,
But take my words to body.
(Note: At this juncture the singer should cast himself into the river.)

Filling 'Em In.

Again are we asked to supply names for initials, and sometimes we find ourselves hardput to make good on our promise. But in time we hope to increase the output of our factory. Innumerable requests have been received to fill out the initials of Mayor J. A. Best. Personally we have a good deal of sympathy for any man having the initials J. A., for they just naturally suggest an animal of the mule family the name of which we refrain from uttering from a sense of propriety. At that the mayor is no more unfortunate than J. A. Blakeley or the two J. A. Pies.

"What do the J. F. of J. F. Robinson stand for?" asks a correspondent. They might stand for many things, such as Jelly Fish or Jolly Fellow, but knowing him as we do, should say that Jolly Fellow would be more fit and proper.
And again we are asked to fill in the W. L. of W. L. Thompson. His imperial cast of countenance and the fact that he is sometimes referred to as Kaiser Bill would lead us to believe that War Lord would not be inappropriate, and by this we do not mean to reflect upon his patriotism in the least.

We have done our best to fill out the names of the city fathers. Ralph Polson belongs in the same class as Abraham Lincoln and is, therefore, immune from our treatment. There's C. E. Penland, C. E., as everyone knows, stands for Christian Endesvor. As for R. F. Kirkpatrick, his baronial acres, justifies us in interpreting his initials as Rich Farmer. The H. J. or H. J. Taylor might be High Jinks or Harry Jew or Huge Joke or Honest John. Take your choice. Councilman Murphy's initials are E. J. and the only way we can account for them is that they stand for Economy Jar. We are not thinking of his capacity as a container but of his position as chairman of the finance committee. The D. D. of Councilman Phelps' name must stand for Dare Devil, for in the library fight he has rushed in where other business men have feared to tread. Councilman Vaughan's J. L. can be extended into Juley Lemon. There remains of the eight councilmen but Joe H. Ell and we would not tamper with his name unless it would be to cancel the J. and E. of Joe.

A Bone-Dry Bonehead.

There were many little tragedies in connection with the closing of the season on two-quart shipments some unfortunates had shipments in the express offices but their 25 days did not expire until the day after the bone-dry went into effect. However, of all the little tragedies the one which touched us the most was that in which Hugh Bell was implicated. Hugh, not being a drinking man, didn't know much about ordering a shipment. He had been told that Joel B. Frazier is a popular brand of whiskey, so in sending in his order, he wrote, "Send me two quarts whiskey, Joel B. Frazier." Evidently an inexperienced shipping clerk got hold of the order and expressed it out to Joel B. Frazier, Helix, Oregon. Now the express agent at Helix knew Hugh and of course he couldn't get away with signing the name of Frazier. He suggested that he get Frank Frazier to sign up for it but Hugh says, "I can't see where that would better the situation."

A Sad Predicament.

Frank Whitestone was seen pawing the air and breathing hard last Tuesday. Chief Gardner asked the meaning of his distress. "I know I've got a shipment at the express office," he said "but darned if I can remember the name I used."

IRRIGATION CODE UNIFYING LAWS OF STATE IS BY HOUSE

(East Oregonian Special by Mail.)
SALEM, Ore., Feb. 9.—The irrigation code, house bill No. 153, after extensive amendment in committee after its submission by a committee appointed by the Oregon Irrigation Congress to draft it, was passed by the house today. The code unifies the irrigation laws of the state but few radical changes have been made and the wording of the old statutes and amendments has been retained so far as practicable. The code was presented by O. Laurgaard of Multnomah county.

Procedure relating to organization of irrigation districts has been slightly changed by the code. The purposes for which a district may be organized under section 1 of the new measure, are for irrigation, betterment, reconstruction, extension, purchase, operation or maintenance of work or for the assumption as principal or guarantor of the indebtedness on account of district lands of the United States under the reclamation laws. Cities and towns so favoring, may be included in the irrigation districts under the provisions of the act.

Three Directors Only.
In the new act three directors are provided, instead of six, as under the present law. The change was made for the reason that it was believed that the smaller body would be able to act with considerable more dispatch, especially in view of the example of the county government, conducted by three commissioners. The directors may be elected either at large or from divisions of the district. Clerks of election have been eliminated, leaving the entire work of the conduct of elections to the judges.

The treasurer of the county where the petition for the district is filed is made, by the new act, the treasurer ex-officio of the district.

Engineer Must Approve Work.
In the section referring to the making of plans for the district, more emphasis has been given to the State Engineer. In the law as it will read, he is not obliged to definitely approve or reject the plans. The section providing for the letting of contracts has been amended so that where the work was to be done by a competent irrigation engineer and approved by the board of directors of the district, it must now have the approval of the state engineer. This provision was made in order, as the author explained, that the work should have the supervision of a disinterested party.

Section 18 of the new law is drawn for the purpose of making the district law conform to the requirements of the U. S. Reclamation Act, and attorneys for the Reclamation service have cooperated in its preparation. Mr. Laurgaard stated that both the settlers and the government men are anxious to secure the adoption of the provisions of this section in order to overcome serious difficulties which have arisen with reference to the operation of the projects under the Water Users Association plan. They will have no bearing on district organizations other than those under the Reclamation Act but will permit them to take advantage of the act if they desire.

May Bond Freely.

Another section in which the Reclamation Service is interested is that which provides for an election for the execution of a contract with the United States. Little change has been made in the bonding provisions except such as will permit the district to bond for any purpose required, rather than merely for the purpose of construction or purchase of works. Heretofore, it is argued that the district has been handicapped in the matter of bonding for payment of interest or in the issuance of refunding bonds. Provision has been made for the cancellation of a bond issue in case it is found necessary to issue a new lot.
In cases of default in payment of bonds, it is provided that the government or the bond holders, as the case may be, may take possession of the work until payment has been made and that, in case of sales for taxes, the district may become a bidder. Under the new law, all bonds are issued on an equal footing.

Provision is also made for the retirement of bonds at any interest paying date, with the payment of a premium of 3 per cent. A bond fund is created, into which all assessments shall be paid until there is sufficient in the fund to pay the next installment of principal and interest.

Method of Assessment.

In order to avoid the situation by which, by equal assessment on every acre of land, it would be impossible to secure partial water rights within a district, except by purchase of these rights by cash or bonds of the district, provision is made in the new law whereby the district may purchase the water right, rights of way and other property, required and allow a corresponding decrease in the amount the owner of said water right or property would be required to pay. Provision is made by which persons securing water rights through partially constructed works shall pay the maintenance on the same instead of distributing the maintenance charge over the entire district. Assessments are collected in the same manner as county and state taxes are collected and by the same agents.

A requirement is made that a voter in the district must own two or more acres in the district. The requirement was made in order to prevent owners of city lots within a district from voting. Holders of incomplete titles to government land within the district are also allowed to vote.

The remaining sections of the law have not been changed except that provision has been made for the contest of an election which has failed and, in accordance with court decisions on the subject, the right of assignment of water has been eliminated.

Villa and Carranza might now get together and give three loud "vivas" because Uncle Sam has other troubles.

Humors Come to the Surface in the spring as in no other season. They don't run themselves all off that way, however, but mostly remain in the system. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes them, wards off danger, makes good health sure.—Adv.
