Marching four abreast, they extended over several blocks and, so full did the street become that the marshals quit trying to line up the throngs that stood on the sidewalks.

Thousands of American flags, large and small, were borne aloft, the street overhead was illumined with strings of incandescents and red fire was burned along the line of march. The bands played patriotic airs and the marchers cheered as they walked. It was such a parade as can only be seen when a people is stirred with patriotism.

Big Meetings Held.

The paraders flocked to the two theaters in such numbers that they were filled to the doors in a few minutes even after extra chairs had been brought and the standing room taken.

Dr. I. U. Temple presided over the meeting at the Oregon theater. Patriotic numbers were played by the Alta Theater orchestra and they were sung by a large chorus under the direction of Miss Esther South, Miss South also sang two solo numbers.

One of the features at both theaters was the appearance on the stage of a number of little folk garbed patriotically. Betty Bond was Miss Columbia, Johnny Chloupek was Uncle Sam, Marian Moorhouse represented a Red Cross nurse, Burke Hayes and Billy Clark represented the army and navy respectively, while Jimmy Raley and Homer Welch appeared as stretcher bearers in the hospital service.

Mrs. Adah Losh Rose gave a reading at each of the theaters, the verses being of a patriotic nature.

Senator Frederick Steiwer was the opening speaker at the Oregon theater. After recalling briefly the history of the origin and development of the nation and the lessons to be derived from it, he sounded a note of preparedness, impressing upon the audience the need of arousing from the sense of security which had weakened the defenses of the country. Col. J. H. Raley predicted the declaration of war and the shedding of American blood within 20 days and appealed for a readiness for service and sacrifice.

Rev. J. E. Snyder explained the Red Cross and National Honor Guard movements, and asked for generous aid and support of them.

President Is Supporter. At the close of the meeting at the Oregon theater Mrs. Sibbie Page Morton, widow of the late General Morton and the organizer of the Umatilla county branch of the Red Cross, made a motion that an expression of sympathy, loyalty and approval be sent to President Wilson. The motion was seconded by Mrs. John Vert and carried with a rousing vote. The audience also passed a resolution asking all employers of labor to go in person as willing to take back in their employ such of their employees as enlisted and to give them positions as good as when they left. W. W. Harrah made the motion and it was seconded by J. F. Robinson.

Women Are Cheered.

Cheers were given for Mrs. H. H. Hattery, Mrs. John Vert, Mrs. J. F. Robinson, Mrs. Morton and other ladies instrumental in organizing the Red Cross and planning the demonstration and also for the Weston band for coming to Pendleton to aid in the demonstration.

At the Alta theater Will M. Peterson was the principal speaker and stirred his audience to enthusiasm time and again. Judge Lowell explained the Red Cross movement and Sergeant Swartz of the naval recruiting station explained briefly the need of 20,000 more men for the first line of defense. Later he made a similar talk at the Oregon theater.

Music at the Alta theater was furnished by the Weston band.

A colored quartet sang several popular numbers and a large choir, under the leadership of M. L. Peters, led the singing. Miss Nellie Anibal acted as accompanist. A solo selection was also given by Walter Rose.

Mayor J. A. Best presided over the Alta meeting. The invocation there was given by Father O'Hagen and at the Oregon theater by Rev. H. H. Cleveland. The seats of honor at the Alta theater were occupied by the G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans and the National Honor Guard, while at the Oregon theater they were occupied by the Red Cross ladies and the St. Anthony hospital nurses.
