Deer Die During Winter.
That many deer and elk have died during the winter of starvation is the belief of Nate Raines, John Day stockman who is visiting here. He states that he has seen many of the same animals during the winter and that all have been very poor. They have been forced down from the mountains in search of food and he thinks many probably perished. While driving over the mountains in Pendleton he saw a band of seven and all appeared very weak. They seemed to fear to move, he states, because of the danger of breaking through the snow crust. Mr. Raines himself had difficulty in getting over the mountains as his back and horses frequently broke through the snow. Along the John Day river the snow is gone, he states, and his cattle have been turned out for more than a week.

THE VALVE-IN-HEAD BUICK
is the key that opens the door to Nature's own playgrounds. It pauses at a thousand pleasant places that the trains rush by with a roar of disdain. It enters into the spirit and mood of every outing, romping up the hills and waiting patiently at the summits while the kiddies hunt for wild flowers and the grown-ups drink in the long vistas of light and color. And while the Buick is refreshing the merry-makers with a change of scene and varying recreation, it is giving them a tonic of sunshine and ozone that makes big appetites and healthy bodies.
