OREGON'S WILD HOGS ROUNDED UP TO SELL.

Pork's High Prices Puts Premium On Pigs Running Free in Mountain Ranges.

BANDON, Ore., April 21.—The high price of pork has caused a general round-up of wild hogs in this vicinity, and the remotest recesses of the mountains are being scoured for them. One drove was brought in through three feet of snow. The wild hogs of this vicinity live principally on acorns. They are branded and rounded up like cattle on the range when ready for market.

Why not use some of those German shells to convey the irreconcilable pacifists and Germanophiles to the land of their love?

GARDEN TALKS

By Virgil Fendall, Instructor in Agriculture at the Pendleton High School.

When we want to build a house we always plan it first. Then we know how much material we shall need to buy. When we want to plant a garden we should plan it first. Then we know how much seed we must get. A garden plan will save money and make the work easier.

A garden plan is a drawing of the garden on paper. It shows the size of the garden, the length of the rows, the distance between rows, and the kind of vegetable planted in each row.

When we have our garden plot picked out and measured, the next thing to decide is what to plant. All garden vegetables are either short season crops or long season crops. Short season crops grow fast and get ready for use in a few weeks. Long season crops are slow growers, and are not ready for use until late in the season.

Short season vegetables that grow well here and should be in every garden are radishes, lettuce, peas, early carrots, spinach, onion sets, early beets and early turnips. They will be ready to use in six to ten weeks after planting.

Beans, cabbage, parsnips, potatoes, brussels sprouts, late turnips, late carrots, onions from seed and late beets are good long season vegetables for the back lot garden. Most of these will need water during the dry season.

Don't plant each vegetable in a bed by itself that wastes space and makes the garden hard to cultivate. Run each row the full length of the garden lengthwise if it is level. If it is on a hillside, don't run the rows up and down the hill if you expect to irrigate. Run them across the slope so they will be level.

Plant all short season crops together in one part of the garden. Do the same with the long season crops. Then you can grow two short season crops in one season.

Keep a record of your garden and you will be more interested in it. A record should show the time of planting, the varieties, the time each vegetable comes up, when it is ready to use, when it was last used, how much the garden yielded, and the money received from vegetables if any are sold.

Get into the habit of reading about how to grow things. The Country Gentleman always contains articles on gardening. This week's issue contains a good article on garden plans, with some plans sketched plainly. Read it.

My next article will tell how to prepare your soil for garden, and how to get your seed.

SCHWAB REFUSES $100,000,000 BRIBE

Boston's Mayor Says German Agent Wanted to Stop Munitions for Allies.

BOSTON, Mass., April 21.—Mayor Curley caused a sensation at a patriotic mass meeting by asserting that an emissary of the German government offered Charles M. Schwab $100,000,000 if the Bethlehem Steel company would cease making munitions for the allies.

The mayor said he got this information from Mr. Schwab himself about two weeks ago at the launching of an Argentine steamship at the Fore River yards in Quincy. Mr. Schwab told him, he averred, that the offer was made two days before congress declared that a state of war with Germany existed.

"And this big American, who stood for the great principle of the republic, refused," added the mayor, amid applause. The meeting was for the purpose of stimulating recruiting. After it was over, Mayor Curley was asked for further details of the bribe offer to Mr. Schwab, but he said he had told all he knew about it.

AMMUNITION HID IN GERMAN'S BARN

Owner of 10,000 Rounds of Rifle Cartridges Seized by Troops Denies Hostility.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 18.—A thousand shots of government ammunition has been seized by a detachment from Co. L of the First Regiment, Connecticut Infantry, in the home of Christopher Kempf, a German farmer, near Putnam, Northwestern Connecticut. Under orders from Major Geo. J. Rafu, Lieut. Pullerton took nine men to Kempf's farm. Surrounding the house he told Kempf his errand. Kempf showed the soldiers the three boxes in which the ammunition was concealed under stairs in the barn. He explained that his son, Joseph, who lived in New York and was employed by H. G. Selig, Jr., son-in-law of Jacob Ruppert, the brewer, brought it to the farm a year and a half ago.

Christopher Kempf said Mr. Selig gave the cartridges to his son in part payment for work. His son frequently brought hunting parties to the farm and had taken the ammunition, thinking it would be available for their rifles.

United States Attorney Spooley and his assistant, Raymond G. Lincoln, are investigating, as are agents of the department of justice. Major Rafu consulted Col. Goodman and other officers at the armory here.
