

How I got them Crisp

(Report No. 7) By a waffle fiend

I travel quite a bit. I sometimes order waffles in hotels, but somehow they never come crisp enough.

So the other day I got enterprising. I had a waffle iron sent home. "Now honey," said I, "Let's have some real waffles. I want you to make them yourself."

I had heard that Cottolene made crisp cooking, so we agreed to use Cottolene. I hung around the kitchen and watched. After the sifting and mixing, the Cottolene was added—a third less than our butter recipe called for.

Some more finishing touches. Then my wife swabbed the waffle iron with Cottolene, poured in the batter and—

Well, I never tasted waffles so delicious! They were a rich golden brown. And crisp! My, how crisp those waffles were! I never tasted waffles anywhere that were so crisp. We served them hot, with real Chautauqua County syrup.

My wife had never made waffles before, but after that first batch, she might have qualified as waffle champion of the world. Or should the championship go to Cottolene?

Perhaps you had better try it yourself and see.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

TRY GRANDMOTHER'S OLD FAVORITE RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR.

Almost everyone knows that Bessy and Sulphur, properly compounded brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't say gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does so naturally and evenly. You dab on a spatula or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by rubbing the gray hair disappear, and after another application of two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful hair regulator for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

GARDEN TALKS

By Virgil Fendall, Instructor in Agriculture in the Pendleton High School.

The effect that the present gardening campaign will have on the food supply next winter will depend a great deal upon the kind of vegetables that are planted this spring. What are you planting?

We ought to plant vegetables that can be stored and kept for use during the winter. That means potatoes, beans, parsnips, carrots, turnips or rutabagas, winter squashes, late cabbage, onions.

We may not have room to grow all these vegetables. Then we ought to grow those that will produce the most food on the space they take up in the soil. Let us see which are the best from this standpoint.

I read in the paper a few days ago that someone had said we ought to grow beans instead of potatoes, because beans have a higher food value. Let us see if this is true.

Pound for pound, beans contain about four times as much food as potatoes. But wait a minute. How many pounds of beans can you grow on an acre? Nine hundred pounds is a good yield. At the same time, an ordinary acre of spuds would easily yield seven thousand five hundred pounds. Figure that out and you will see that Mr. Spud will furnish you twice as much food as the bean on the same amount of ground.

Now let us see how some of these other crops compare with spuds. Parsnips contain almost as much food, pound for pound, as potatoes. And you can grow a great many more pounds on an acre. Figure on this basis, and you will find the parsnip is almost double the value of the potato for food.

Carrots will approach parsnips in food value, but they are not so much relished as a table vegetable. All the other crops mentioned will compare favorably with the potato in food value when we consider productiveness.

It is not too late to plant all these crops. Remember this season is about a month late.

Hollow Crown is a good variety of parsnip. Plant late varieties of carrots for winter use. The Hubbard is the favorite variety of winter squash. The ground should be warm before beans and squashes are planted. Bean seed will rot in cold soil, so don't hurry the bean planting.

Onions for winter can be grown from either seeds or sets. It takes them four to five months to get ready to harvest when grown from seeds. From sets they will ripen twenty to thirty days earlier. It isn't too late yet to plant onions.
