FOREST NOTES

Palom wood, found in Central America, is said to be the lightest known wood. It is lighter than cork and has an average specific gravity of only .161.
A wood specimen found in glacial drift and estimated by the Wisconsin state geologist to be approximately half a million years old has been identified by the Forest Products Laboratory of the Forest Service as spruce.

State forests with a total of over 3,500,000 acres have been established in thirteen states. Of these New York has the largest forests, which comprises 1,825,000 acres; Pennsylvania is second with 1,088,000 acres and Wisconsin third with 493,000 acres.
The largest number of sheep grazed on any single National Forest is 215,718, finding pasture on the Humboldt in Nevada, while the largest number of cattle—75,818 head—is found on the Tonto in Arizona. The value of the average annual meat product of these two National Forests is estimated at $2,000,000.
On parts of the Angeles National Forest in California the jackrabbits are so abundant that many of the young pine planted by the Forest Service have been killed or injured by the rodents. The damage seems to take place chiefly in the late summer and fall, and is more extensive in dry than in wet seasons. It is thought that the rats tear off the tender bark of the trees to obtain moisture at times when water is scarce.
