MRS. CITIZEN:— And what is your part in the Great War?

Are you satisfied that you are doing your share toward aiding the wounded soldiers to be? Some of them may be your sons, your brothers, maybe your husband will be there.

Think of this— And then you will easily see that further support than knitting and sewing must be given by you. Make up your mind to make a genuine sacrifice for the boys who will offer their lives across the water.

Maybe it is an extra coat, or dress, a trip that you have in mind—give up one or all of these and turn the share into the Red Cross fund. Then—and not until then—can you say right down deep in your heart that you have done your bit.

What a real joy and satisfaction it will be to feel that you are doing something substantial to aid your country. There are so many things that the wounded boys must have— They are offering their lives—bearing the pain.

You at home, Mrs. Citizen, must realize what this means and make a vow this very day that you are going to help them. Cut off some of the dainties from your table—some of the extras These few dollars thus saved are going to do more good than all the dollars you have ever given to charity.

They are going to make it that much easier for some American lad across the water. Maybe those very dollars will mean the saving of human lives. Mrs. Citizen, look at the War and the Red Cross Fund in this light—and then you will be more than anxious to do your part in the Great War.
