NEWS SERVICE FOR CANADA.

Practically All Daily Papers Included in Move.

OTTAWA, Sept. 4.—Today marked the formal opening of the Canadian national news service, operating under the name and character of the Canadian Press, Limited. Every daily newspaper in Canada, with but a few small exceptions, has been connected by a leased telegraph wire with every other Canadian news paper office and with the head office in New York.

Including both day and night wires the new association will operate nearly 12,000 miles of leased wire and employ between 80 and 90 expert telegraphers in the interchange of news between all parts of the dominion.

Each Canadian publisher whose newspaper is included has not only committed himself to his share of the expense, but has also bound himself to supply to the Canadian Press Limited, all the home news he collects for his own newspaper. The inauguration of a national news service was marked by congratulatory messages between the publishers of the provinces of the dominion farther east and west. The prime minister honored the new service by a message over his own signature.

GUARD AGAINST FROST DAMAGE

Weather Bureau specialists Tell How to Protect Garden Stuff Before and After Killing Temperatures.

Frosts can not be forecast many days in advance. The United States weather bureau does, however, issue advisory warnings of frost from 24 to 48 hours in advance of its expected occurrence. These forecasts are telegraphed to practically every section of the country. As the season for frost approaches, the weather forecasts should be watched closely and when heavy or killing frost is forecast for any locality protection should be provided for such producers as are susceptible to injury by cold weather.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Don't watch the moon for signs of the first frost; watch the weather bureau. And when the warning from the weather bureau comes, as it usually will from 24 to 48 hours in advance, look to the protection of the garden produce which is not yet under cover. There are a number of ways to forestall the surprise attacks of this Jack Frost person and representatives of the United States weather bureau, realizing that a good deal more produce will be subject to loss from frost this fall than ever before, have advised early preparedness on the part of farmers.

Protective coverings Urged. First, the specialists suggest, protective coverings should be made ready. Vegetables can not scamper to cover, but the gardener can scamper covering to the vegetables and perhaps save a winter's supply in a short time if he is prepared. Old blankets, tarpaulins, sacks, straw, manure, paper and various other materials may be used for covering. The conditions favorable for the formation of early frost in fall are usually of short duration and consequently protective measures ordinarily will have to be employed only for a day or two. After the first fall frost there is generally a return to normal temperatures for a number of days, possibly for a week or more, during which time immature vegetables that have been protected will continue to grow and ripen.

Or Gather the Vegetables. When frost is imminent and protection is not possible or practicable, vegetables likely to be injured should be gathered and canned, dried, pickled, preserved or stored. Those that can not be saved from exposure to freezing should, if possible, be gathered before thawing takes place. In the case of potatoes, especially sweet potatoes, all vines should be cut off at the surface of the ground after the occurrence of frost.

Tomatoes may be pulled up, plants and all, and hung tons downward in a dark place, preferably a cellar. When treated in this way the fruit will ripen slowly and sweetly and will be available for table use for a long time after the plants have been removed from the soil. Fruit that is very immature should be removed from the vines and may be used for pickling or in other ways. If facilities for hanging the vines are lacking, the tomatoes nearing full growth will ripen satisfactorily if wrapped separately in paper and stored in a dark place.

Many Are Not Harmed. Many vegetables such as cabbage and turnips are not harmed by early frost and need no special protection. In fact, such root vegetables as carrots, parsnips and salsify are improved by freezing and are customarily left in the ground until needed.
